Security Administration, 'Nation-wide Program' Urged in Report.

Increase Is Cited In Rural Tenancy

President Asks Action to Curb 'Exploitation' of 15,000,000.

By Sidney Olson.

The insecurity of 15,000,000 people on the farms of America, caused by "generations of unthinking exploitation of our agricultural resources, both land and people," brought from President Roosevelt yesterday a message to Congress recommending four types of action.

The message, accompanied by a 73-page report by the President's Special Committee on Farm Tenancy, after stressing that "the facts reveal a grave problem of great magnitude and complexity," insisted that "a Nationwide program under Federal leadership and with the assistance of States, counties, communities and individuals is the only solution."

The message's concluding sentence, considered by commentators to be an indirect reference to the Supreme Court's rulings on New Deal social legislation, stated:

"Most Americans believe that our form of Government does not prohibit action on behalf of those who need help."

"Not Solved Overnight."

While the message held that "action to provide security is imperative," the President reminded Congress that "a problem of such magnitude is not solved overnight, nor by any one limited approach, nor by the Federal Government alone."

The four types of action recommended by the President were listed as follows:

"First, action to open the doors of ownership to tenants who now have the requisite ability and experience, but who can become owners only with the assistance of liberal credit, on long terms, and technical advice.

"Second, modest loans, with the necessary guidance and education to prevent small owners from slipping into tenancy, and to help the masses of tenants, croppers and farm laborers at the very bottom of the agricultural ladder increase their standards of living, achieve greater security, and begin the upward climb toward ownership.

"Third, the retirement by public agencies of land proved to be unsuited for farming, and assistance to the families living thereon in finding homes on good land.

"Fourth, co-operation with State and local agencies of Government to improve the general leasing system."

Farm Security Unit Asked.

For Federal action:

Formation of a Farm Security Administration, under the Department of Agriculture, around the nucleus of the Resettlement Administration.

Formation of an affiliate organization, the Farm Security Corporation, to make loans, purchases of stock and equipment, and acquire, improve and dispose of land.

A national program of land purchase by the Government for disposition by long-term (40-year) sale contracts to operating farmers.

Trial leases of not more than five years; a variable payment system where good years would require higher payments than lean years; soil conservation requirements.

Tentative trial of subleasing by the Government from landlords for long periods of good land at reasonable rental for the same purpose as the purchased land.

Co-operative Units.

The granting of aid by the new FSA and FSC to farmers in setting up local co-operative associations and co-operative credit unions which would also buy or lease land for sublease to group members.

Expansion of the program as justified by experience.

Aid to debt-bogged landowners where but a few hundred dollars are required to liquidate indebtedness through the Farm Credit Administration.

Rehabilitation loans similar to those of the RA for share-croppers and those who cannot qualify for production credit loans.

Abolition of the present restriction of this type of loan to persons on relief.

Further Study Urged.

Further research into the farm laborers' problem beyond the operation and maintenance of sanitary camps for migratory workers.

The gradual resettlement of 500,000 farm families living on land too poor to provide an adequate livelihood and the retirement of this land—95,000,000 to 100,000,000 acres—as submarginal land for forestation, recreational areas, wild life refuges and grazing, at the rate of 2,000,000 to 5,000,000 acres a year at an average price of slightly more than $4 per acre.

The discouragement of land speculation and absentee farm ownership by four methods: through the Farm Credit Administration, the Federal Reserve System, a new

Numbers Raid Nets 3 Captives, $1,971 in Coins

Magnitude of the numbers racket in Washington was revealed last night when Third Precinct police raided the "counting house" of the Warring gang at 2423 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

The place occupied the third floor of the three-story brick building. The raid was timed so all collections were in, police said, so they seized $1,971 in pennies, nickles, dimes and quarters, a few bills and four checks issued to persons on direct relief.

This daily "take," said Precinct Detective Roy Blick, on whose evidence warrants were issued for the raid after he had watched activities there for more than a week, means that the gang did a yearly gross business of nearly $800,000—or more than half a million dollars.

Three Arrested.

The raiders, led by Capt. Arthur E. Miller, arrested Ellis L. "Sugar Pops" Solet, 30, of 2423 Pennsylvania avenue northwest; Edward J. Juliano, 31, of 4415 New Hampshire avenue northwest, and Edward Oliver, 27, of 1442 Fairmont street northwest.

Capt. Miller, who said the raid was the "beginning of the end of the Warring gang," said the raided establishment was where all the numbers runners of the mob brought their day's collections.

In the establishment was what police described as a $4,000 counting machine. This apparatus, they said, sorted various sizes of coins and wrapped them in stacks according to size.

The counting house occupied three rooms. One was an office, the second housed stacks of manila paper for the coin sorting and wrapping machine, and the third was used as a bedroom. Numbers slips, the blank books used by runners and two electric adding machines were also confiscated.

The three men arrested were charged with operating a lottery.

Detective Blick, whose work resulted in the raid, was transferred from the headquarters vice squad to the Third Precinct about a month ago.

Severest Snowstorm of Year Disrupts Washington Traffic

Two Deaths Attributed to 5.9-Inch Fall; Bright Sun, Thawing Temperatures Are Forecast for Today.

A man and a woman were dead as the result of the storm. The woman, Mrs. Anna M. B. Eslin, 73, of 1113 B street northeast, died shortly after she had stepped into the path of a street car, her vision, according to witnesses, apparently obscured by the snow.

The second death was that of Ben Umbau, 74, who collapsed and died of a heart attack while shoveling snow in front of his home at 5222 Nebraska avenue.

The snowfall began about 8:30 o'clock in the morning and continued throughout the day. By 11 o'clock last night officials at the Weather Bureau said approximately 5.9 inches carpeted the Capital.

Today will be clear with a bright sun and little change in temperature, the forecaster said. He added, however, that the mercury probably will reach almost 40 during the day, and there would be some thaw. Tomorrow will be cloudy and warmer, with possible rains.

Yesterday's maximum reading was 39, recorded at 7:30 a. m. Thereafter the temperature fell, and it was around 30 late last night.

As traffic crept cautiously through the streets, school children were released from classes at noon. They promptly fell to snow-balling one another and crying in glee, as this was their first chance at real winter sport this season.

Air traffic in and out of the Capital was disrupted by the snow, and planes scheduled to stop here continued to their destinations without stopping.

From Camden to Richmond airliners were flying "over the top," or above the snow, which was general in this area, being reported 200 miles beyond Pittsburgh and as far south as Knoxville, Tenn.

Court Writ Defied By Military Chief In Indiana Town

Anderson, Ind., Feb. 16 (U.P.).—Col. Albert H. Whitcomb, National Guard commandant enforcing martial law in this industrial city, tonight refused to obey a Circuit Court order permitting union attorneys to see 17 militray prisoners, members of the United Automobile Workers of America.

Tugwell Arrives At Child's Bedside After Plane Dash

New York, Feb. 16 (U.P.).—Rexford Guy Tugwell, former New Deal Undersecretary of Agriculture, visited his stricken daughter, Tunis, in a New York hospital tonight after an airplane dash from the West Indies, arranged by President Roosevelt and Pan-American Airways.

The plane broke a speed record in the flight from Trinidad to Newark, whence he rushed by automobile to the hospital. His daughter, suffering from double pneumonia, was greatly improved after his arrival.

Man-Made Meteor Found in Pittsburgh Kiln Explains Origin of Fiery Bodies, Scientists Say

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 16.—One of the mysteries of the stars, the origin of meteors, was explained partly here today in announcement of an iron meteor made by the hand of man, the first of its kind, in a laboratory furnace at Pittsburgh.

There are two kinds of meteors, iron-nickel and stone. The Pittsburgh furnace meteor was iron-nickel. It appeared apparently by accident in a furnace of the metals research laboratory of the Carnegie Institute of Pittsburgh.

The scientists were not looking for meteors in their furnace. They were studying, for the benefit of the American steelmaker, the queer pattern of crystals of iron-nickel meteors, a pattern different from the ordinary earthly alloy of iron and nickel.

The results were reported today to the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers by Robert F. Kehl, head of the institute's department of metallurgy, and Gerhard Derge.

In the "iron" meteors which fall to earth, the metal crystals all point in approximately the same direction, like compass needles.

"Why?" the iron men asked.

It must have been, was the theoretical answer, because originally the meteor was a single big crystal.

Inasmuch as the biggest "iron" meteors found on earth weigh more than 40 tons, it was hard to believe in such gigantic proportions of a single crystal.

The Pittsburgh furnace meteor apparently solved this question. The answer was: Yes, big crystals probably exist.

The accidental meteor was a piece of iron-nickel about the size of a hickory nut. It was made of three single crystals. When Dr. Mehl cooled them slowly, single crystals transformed at about 500 degrees Fahrenheit into the small crystals, compass needle style, of the real meteors.

When he cooled one of these large meteor crystals too rapidly for it to have time to change until it reached 180 below zero, it formed a different pattern. This was not the meteor pattern.

Tracing this story of the crystals back into what must happen in space, the iron meteors may now be said tentatively to have cooled slowly. It is also apparent that they originated in a very hot place. Stars are the only known places hot enough.

Explosions of stars could throw off the masses of iron found in meteors. These "firecracker stars" are well known to astronomers. Four of them were seen in telescopes last year.

Britain Plans Seven-Billion Rearmament

3 Capital Ships and 7 Cruisers to Be Laid Down This Year.

Increased 1937 Budget for Munitions Shown in White Paper.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 16.—A Government white paper tonight set an official estimate of $7,500,000,000 for Great Britain's rearmament program during the next five years.

The white paper, on defense of the nation, announced the government had ordered construction of three new capital ships and seven cruisers during the fiscal year starting April 1.

Britons, already prepared for higher income taxes in the next budget, believed their worst fears were confirmed in the white paper's warning:

"It would be imprudent to contemplate a total expenditure for defense in the next five years of much less than £1,500,000,000 ($7,500,000,000)."

Plan 2 Aircraft Carriers.

The official statement said the 1937 program might include also two aircraft carriers in addition to two already being built. The capital ships, it was announced, will be similar to two $40,000,000 ships-of-the-line recently laid down.

Although it showed Great Britain's aerial strength had risen from 31,000 men to 50,000 between 1934 and 1936, further large increases were contemplated.

"Modern aircraft developments," the paper said, "have made this country increasingly vulnerable to air attack."

Other defense measures announced in the white paper included creation of two new infantry divisions, creation of two new tank battalions and a large increase in naval personnel.

Cites Two Reasons.

Dealing with the development of the navy, whose 1936 program alone was estimated to cost nearly £50,000,000 ($250,000,000), the white paper said:

"For some years the country will be constrained to undertake a series of heavy naval building programs. The main reasons for this course are:

"First, that a considerable number of the existing ships were built during the Great War and are, or will shortly become, overage.

"Second, that no vessesl of certain types were built for a number of years immediately after the war.

* * *

"The average cost for the years 1931 to 1934 was less than £12,002,000 ($60,000,000), but the cost of the 1936 program, including measures for acceleration, will be nearly £50,000,000 ($250,000,000). It is contemplated that the cost of the 1937 program will be substantially higher."

Forbes Morgan Chosen President Of Whisky Group

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—W. Forbes Morgan, investment banker and treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, today formally was appointed president and directing head of the Distilled Spirits Institute, self-regulatory body set up by the liquor industry.

His appointment was ratified by representatives of the distilling industry this afternoon and announced by Owsley Brown, of Louisville, Ky., who has been president of the institute since its inception.

Brown was named chairman of the board and L. J. MacNamara, of New York, vice chairman. The institute, organized late in 1933, is made up of 97 whisky distillers.

Dr. James M. Doran, former commissioner of industrial alcohol, is executive director of the institute. He is in charge of technical problems.

"The selection of Mr. Morgan as president of the institute," Brown said, "indicates the broadening of our program with special reference to a broader policy in public relations."

McNutt Hinted For Federal Post

By the Associated Press.

There was new talk in the Capital last night that former Gov. Paul V. McNutt of Indiana may be appointed to an Administration post.

The Indianan and President Roosevelt had a quiet conversation at the White House yesterday. Afterward McNutt told reporters he would have an "answer" tomorrow.

Mr. Roosevelt, asked about it at a press conference, smiled and said that he merely had talked over old times with McNutt.

Since McNutt left the governorship of Indiana he has been mentioned for several positions, including that of Secretary of War and High Commissioner of the Philippines.

Farm Group to Battle Supreme Court Plan; Labor With President

Conference Called To Map Campaign

A. F. L. Executive Council Will Give Stand Within Week.

By William V. Nessly.

Labor forces of the country, centered here, began rallying yesterday to suport "acitvely and energetically" President Roosevelt's proposal for "rehabilitation" of the Supreme Court and other Federal courts.

While Labor's Non-Partisan League, headed by Maj. George L. Berry, John L. Lewis and Sidney Hillman, was announcing a national campaign designed to bring enactment of the presidential plan, it was announced that the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor will take a stand on the reorganization project this week. William Green, president of the federation, who is presiding over sessions of the council here, already has indorsed the President's message individually.

A national convention of Labor's Non-Partisan League, claiming 2,000,000 members in the international unions affiliated with the league, and 32,000 "active workers" in all States, county districts and congressional districts, will be held here within three weeks, Maj. Berry said. In addition there will be mass meetings in the larger cities.

League Statement.

The league statement issued by Berry, Lewis and Hillman said:

"Labor's Non-Partisan League will put all of its resources into a national campaign to secure passage of the bills embodying President Roosevelt's plan for judicial reform.

"The league program will include a national convention of league representatives from all over the United States, to be held in Washington within the next three weeks.

"A series of mass meetings in all of the largest cities of the country will be held by the league in combination with its various affiliated labor organizations.

"The entire membership of the league and of its affiliated groups will be circularized directly, calling to their attention the absolute necessity from labor's standpoint of adopting the President's program. Representatives of the league will take to the air in a national broadcast upon this issue.

"Labor Behind President."

"The purpose of its program will be to show that American labor is behind the President today, as it was during his election campaign, in his program for progressive social and labor legislation.

"We will bring to the attention of every member of Congress, as emphatically as possible, the fact that labor in America demands legal protection of its rights in industry.

"Labor realizes that all of its program may be defeated in the future as it has been in the past, by the arbitrary action of a Supreme Court which has long since lost all real contact with the people of the Nation. Only by judicial reform can the way be opened to social and labor progress.

"Labor's Nonpartisan League stands solidly behind the President in the demand for such judicial reform."

Berry Denies Pressure.

Berry, asked if the President had requested the league action, replied:

"No. We travel under our own power."

He said the President had not been notified of the plan.

He decared the campaign was not planned because of fear the proposal would be defeated in Congress, but that the issue is of such importance "we don't intend to gamble on the result."

"Special pressure" on Congress in the form of letters and telegrams will be used, he said, adding:

"That is inevitable. They will be delighted to hear from the folks

Mrs. Roosevelt's Quip Makes Husband Blush

Neither snow nor slush nor her husband's wisecracks served to stay Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt from heading North yesterday afternoon for a talk at Cornell University.

She entered the President's office while 150 newspapermen were gathered about his desk for the semiweekly press conference.

"Good-bye," she called out.

"Good-bye," he called back, "If you get stuck in a snowdrift, telephone me."

"Yes—I'll telephone you from the snowdrift," she answered, retreating through the door as reporters roared.

The President, flushing as he laughed, turned to the newsmen and observed:

"She would, too."

Supreme Court Change Backed By Legal Guild

Only Dissenter Quits Parley Before Vote Is Held on Bench Proposal.

The newly-organized Washington Chapter of the National Lawyers Guild, made up of liberals in the legal profession, last night approved "unequivocally" President Roosevelt's plan to reorganize the Supreme Court.

The vote of approval was unanimous. One man had objected but by the time the vote was taken he was gone. He was W. C. Sullivan, a lawyer in private practice.

"I most emphatically object," Sullivan shouted when it was proposed to indorse the President's court plan. "Everybody knows that a majority of the members of this organization are in the Government service. It is perfectly ridiculous to pass on this question in any shape or form."

Question Separation.

The other members—three-fourths of whom work for Government agencies, according to Thomas I. Emerson, the first president—did not agree with Sullivan. The only question was whether to indorse the President's court plan by itself or to link that with a proposed Constitutional amendment.

Mark Lauter, of the National Labor Relations Board, introduced a doubled-barreled resolution, one section of which approved "unequivocably" the President's plan of judicial reform, and another of which called for publicizing the need of a constitutional amendment to guarantee progressive legislation.

A number of the young lawyers argued that enemies of the President's plan had put forth the idea of a constitutional amendment, hoping to draw fire from the Supreme Court. It was argued, too, that the President, in trying to change the court, felt that a constitutional amendment was not needed, or would take too long.

Separates Resolutions.

In the end, Lauter separated the two parts of his resolution, and while the court section was adopted unanimously the constitutional amendment section was adopted by a divided vote.

The National Lawyers Guild was started in New York last December. Among its leading lights are Frank P. Walsh, now temporary president; Morris Ernst, Representative Maury Maverick, of Texas; Senator Homer Bone, of Washington, and Gov. Phil La Follette, of Wisconsin.

The Local chapter, which has about 200 members, was formally organized last night at the Washington Hotel with the election of Mr. Emerson, of the Social Security Board, as president; Fred Ballard, in private practice, as vice president; Irving J. Levy, of the Resettlement Administration, as secretary, and Burr Tracy Ansell, in private practice, as treasurer.

Head of National Grange Doubts Wisdom of Proposal.

Georgia Democrat Out Against Plan

By Robert C. Albright.

The National Grange, oldest farm organization, last night veered abruptly away from the President's plan to enlarge the Supreme Court, as Labor's Non-Partisan League announced a National campaign to recruit the backing of workers.

The Grange announcement, most important defection from expected farm and labor support for the judiciary program, coincided with a fresh outburst of sharply divided radio oratory, and another hostile break in the "non-committal" lists of the Senate.

L. J. Taber, National Grange master, declared his organization "doubts the wisdom of giving to any President of the United States at any time the right to change the size of the court because of the age of its members."

Conference Called.

Shortly afterward, Maj. George L. Berry, John L. Lewis and Sidney Hillman called a press conference to announce that Labor's Non-Partisan League, organized to support the President in the last campaign, will conduct a series of mass meetings and hold a national convention here in the next three weeks, to crystallize labor sentiment for the plan.

Later, Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, California Democrat, broadcast the Administration's third systematic radio defense of the President's program, and Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana, assailed it on the air as "subterfuge." Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, followed Van Nuys with a radio indorsement of the "essence" of the President's program.

Meantime, stiffening Senate opposition to proposals to enlarge the Supreme Court by six justices gained new backing on Capitol Hill from Senator Walter F. George, Georgia Democrat, long silent.

George Explains Stand.

"A subservient judiciary is worse than no judiciary at all," said George, confirming reports in Georgia papers that constituents have received letters from him expressing opposition.

Hostility of the National Grange to a remodeled Supreme Court was unexpected, in view of the Administration's reported plan to delay action on the President's bill until farm and labor support developed. The American Farm Bureau Federation, another strong farm organization, has had nothing to say.

"The proposal relative to the Supreme Court is one on which there are grave differences of opinion," said Taber, grange master. "The Supreme Court sits as a unit. Therefore, the mere enlargement of size cannot increase either its speed or efficiency."

Taber said the grange is in accord with other proposals in the President's message, agreeing that "any proper and constructive steps that can be taken to eliminate delay, reduce costs and improve judicial procedure in the inferior Federal courts should have general support."

He asked that the separate propositions be submitted to Congress in separate bills, to the end that the people of the country might express their opinion through their elected representatives.

Leaders in Congress continued to avoid any direct showdown on the Supreme Court proposals. The House Judiciary Committee adjourned after only a bare mention of the plan, and Speaker William B. Bankhead strongly intimated the Senate should act first. The Senate Judiciary Committee has no meeting scheduled until Monday.

But viewed as significant was favorable action by a Senate Judiciary sub-committee yesterday on the Sumners bill to permit Supreme Court justices to retire with full pay at 70. This bill, slated for action next week by the full Judiciary Committee, received sub-committee approval, with only one dissenting

John Barrymore Files Plea Of Bankruptcy in U. S. Court

Los Angeles, Calif., Feb. 16 (AP).—John Barrymore, noted actor, filed in Federal Court today a debtor's petition of bankruptcy under section 74 of the national bankruptcy act.

Barrymore stated in the petition he was unable to meet his debts as they mature and desired to effect "composition or extension of time" to liquidate them.

BARRYMORE.

One of the money problems Barrymore faces is a petition by his wife, Elaine Barrie, for $2,525 a month alimony pending trial of her suit for divorce. Her listed needs included $750 for clothing, $350 for rent, $100 each for groceries and dairy products, together with salaries for a managing agent, chauffeur and maid.

The bankruptcy court clerk said the law under which Barrymore filed his petition permitted a debtor to offer settlement on a percentage basis without jeopardizing his property holdings, and if creditors accept his plan for the adjustment of his debts he does not actually go into bankruptcy.

The law, the clerk explained, provides a debtor may call his creditors into court and offer partial payment on a percentage basis, or obtain an extension of time in which ot make full payments.

Blockade Set Around Spain By 26 Nations

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 16.—Twenty-six European nations tonight cemented a far-flung plan to wall Spain in from the world while foreign volunteers, most of them apparently from France and Italy, raced to beat a Saturday midnight deadline to the zone of war.

Sympathizers with both factions in the civil conflict hurried against time while the International Non-Intervention Committee in London approved a volunteer ban effective at midnight February 20, and a plan to completely blockade the Iberian Peninsula by March 6.

Only Portugal, ardent insurgent supporter, declined to ratify the agreement approved by 26 nations drawing a "sanitary cordon" around the Spanish war.

Sympathizers Hurry.

French and Italian sympathizers, with the Germans significantly missing, either hurried toward Spain or made plans to join the combat before the ban becomes effective. Germany gave no sign of sending further reinforcements, apparently believing Gen. Francisco Franco's insurgent troops will win without more assistance.

French border reports said 1,400 French volunteers had crossed the frontier in February, 650 departing from Perpignan for Barcelona, 300 crossing at Perthus and 450 passing through Cerbere.

Informed sources in Rome interpreted the indirect Italian admission that their troops were largely responsible for the capture of Malaga to mean there would be no cessation of Italian volunteers until the deadline.

10 Planes Shot Down.

(In the Madrid sector, meanwhile, bloody fighting continued. The Associated Press reported that the vital Madrid-Valencia highway was still open despite concentrated attacks by the rebels and reports that the last link to the seaboard had been blasted. More than 5,000 casualties among Loyalist soldiers within the week were reported by the United Press. The correspondent said thousands of fresh troops were being mobilized for "a last stand."

Later, near Madrid, was fought the most spectacular aerial battle of the war. At one time above the coveted highway to the sea eight white parachutes floated. At least ten ships were shot down near the burning town of Tarancon.—Editor's note.)

What to do with recalcitrant Portugal, Spain's next-door neighbor, remained a thorny problem for the "hands-off" Spain committee, which relegated the question to the subcommittee that worked out plans for banning recruits and war supplies in the first place.

Naval Blockade Planned.

A tight naval blockade of both Spanish and Portuguese ports, enforced by the major European powers effective March 6, might induce Portugal to participate in the international action, the committee hoped, and permit the establishment of neutral observers on the Hispano-Portuguese frontier.

The Soviet committee representative, Ivan Maisky, sounded a note of warning that failure of Portugal to co-operate "will jeopardize the whole structure of the scheme." He said Russia might have to reconsider her approval of the program if full co-operation was not achieved.

Rome newspapers, which had almost completely dropped their attempts to conceal Italian volunteer aid, reported numbers crossing the Franco-Spanish frontier to aid the Spanish government.

Italy, Reich Join.

Italy and Germany suddenly joined Russia, England and France last night to approve the subcommittee plan isolating the war, ending months of bickering and deadlock. Final approval of the program was given by 26 nations of the full committee.

They included, in addition to the five major powers: Bulgaria, Turkey, Greece, Austria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Denmark, Yugoslavia, Poland, the Irish Free State, Belgium, the Netherlands, Albania, Latvia, Estonia, Lithuania and Luxembourg.

Paris Seeks Leaders' Parley.

Paris Feb. 16.—International arbitration between Premier Francisco Largo Caballero of the Socialist government and Gen. Francisco Franco, insurgent generalissimo, will be the next immediate aim of France's Spanish policy, informed sources said tonight.

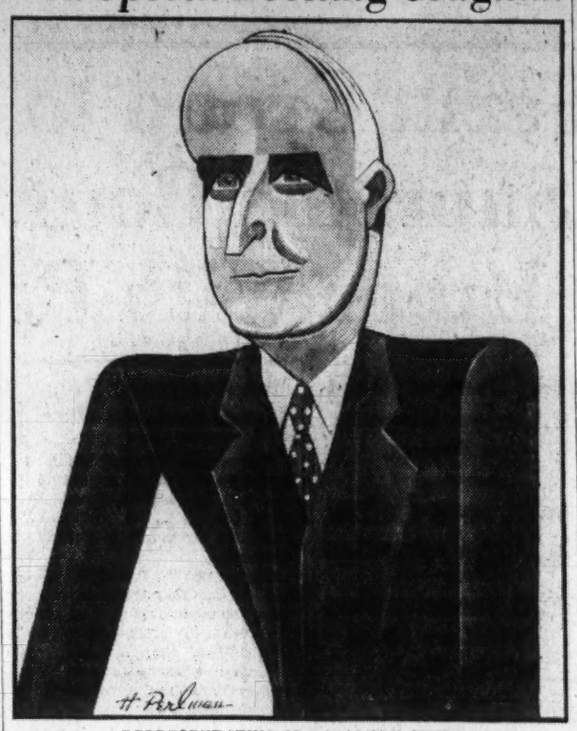
Groups in U. S. Take Sides.

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—The Spanish war is being "fought" more intensively than ever on the many American fronts today as a result of the fall of Malaga and the renewed efforts of the international neutrality committee in London to halt foreign participation.

A conglomeration of groups has been organized to aid the Leftist government of Spain.

New Faces in Congress

Drew's Political Career Forged In Speech Boosting Coughlin



REPRESENTATIVE IRA WALTON DREW.

Farley Drafted Osteopath for Philadelphia Congressional Race After Address, and Candidate Swept to Victory in G. O. P. Stronghold.

By Liam Lenihan.

When the Protestant Ira Walton Drew, Quaker City osteopath, was asked one night last year to elucidate the 16 cardinal principles of the Catholic Father Coughlin he felt suddenly apprehensive, but with a what-the-hell attitude he obliged.

His political career was forged that night. Coughlinites, sensing his value to their cause, booked him for other meetings. And, as a registered disciple of the fiery radio priest, he was drafted as Congressional candidate on their ticket.

Immediately Jim Farley's well-oiled machine went into action and Drew was summoned to headquarters.

"We will withdraw our nominee if you will run as a Democrat," they told him as they angled for a compromise.

Drew at first refused, then he accepted on the condition that his 16 principles would remain unsullied. Thus he succeeded in swampig the Republican opposition that, for 22 years, had been gloating in the saddle.

A New Eglander by birth—he was born in Hardwick, Vt.—Drew went to work as a printer's devil and, after three years, drifted into the less lucrative job as reporter.

That was in the late 90's. And from then until 1911 Drew worked on newspapers from Vermont to Philadelphia.

But even newsmen tire of the wanderlust—or at least newsmen like Drew. Practical minded, ambitious, he enrolled in the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy, graduated, and soon built up a profitable practice.

In his absence his wife, also an osteopath, keeps the patients in line and the home fires burning. "I am losing money here," he confessed yesterday. "But I take a run up to Philly every other Tuesday."

Washington and Congress are all a little confusing to him still. He is still an osteopath in spirit. And so far he has proved to three bone-creaking Representatives that there is a world of good in his therapeutic treatments.

Glass Lays 'Spite' To Security Board

By the Associated Press.

Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, has accused the Social Security Board of abolishing a branch office in his home town "out of spite" for him.

This was disclosed yesterday by the publication of proceedings at a Senate hearing on the independent offices appropriation bill.

"It is my very definite conclusion," the Virginian told Frank Bane, executive officer of the board, "that the board acts as it pleases; and when a Senator is so unfortunate, as I am, to become persona non grata to the board, it proceeds to punish him."

Bane said plans for an office in Lynchburg, the home of the Senator, were abandoned when the board's budget request was curtailed. Later, he said, a rearrangement of plans permitted Lynchburg to be included.

G. M., Workers Brought Closer By Conference

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Feb. 16.—Questions of wages, hours and working conditions for General Motors employes, left unsettled in the peace agreement that ended the strikes in its automotive plants last week, came before a joint conference for settlement today.

William S. Knudsen, executive vice president of General Motors, emerging after the first day's talks, said that for four hours the conferees had discussed "seniority rights and discrimination cases."

The meeting will reopen at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

The union prepared tonight the draft of a plan for arbitration boards to settle grievances of union employes.

"We have been laying plans to set up tribunals for the handling of past, present and future grievances," Homer Martin, U. A. W. A. head, announced.

Meanwhile, General Motors units in a number of cities put production lines in motion for the first time in weeks, and additional thousands of idle employes resumed their jobs. The erstwhile strike "capital," Flint, Mich., returned nearer its normal life, with soldiers of three National Guard Battalions departing for their homes.

Another strike, which tied up Detroit plants of the Nash-Kelvinator Corporation for two weeks, ended with the signing of an agreement for wage increases and negotiations of other demands of the striking union, the Mechanics Educational Society of America.

More than 1,000 sit-down strikers marched out of the refrigerator plant tonight after accepting the terms.

The vote on the strike settlement, signed after it was reached at a nine-hour conference last night, was announced as 1,201 for and 5 against.

Representing General Motors today were Knudsen and his general assistant, C. E. Wilson; Donaldson Brown, finance officer, and his assistant, Stephen Dubrul, and Floyd Tanner, in charge of manufacturing. H. W. Anderson, General Motors labor relations director, whose appearance before the La Follette Senate Committee at Washington prevented his presence today, may join future discussions.

Bankruptcy Asked For William Nolan

A petition asking that William J. Nolan, former head of an automobile agency here, be adjudicated an involuntary personal bankrupt was filed in District Court yesterday by Justus S. Wardell, receiver for the Potomac Savings Bank, and the Munsey Trust Co., both of which claimed to be creditors.

Wardell, acting only for the bank, alleged Nolan was indebted to the extent of $1,152.69, while the Munsey Trust Co. alleged he owed it $262.50 as indorser on a due note.

Stanley D. Willis, attorney for the petitioners, said Nolan had committed acts of bankruptcy when he permitted a local bank to obtain a default judgment for $3,600 and also by withdrawing $4,500 from the Bank of Commerce and Savings and $5,500 from the Hibbs Co., while he was allegedly insolvent.

Nolan is serving a short sentence on a charge of bribing witnesses in his wife's divorce suit to leave town.

President Roosevelt said yesterday he had discussed during the day problems arising out of the influx of foreign money into the United States with Fred I. Kent, chairman of the advisory committee of the New York Stock Exchange.

Tenancy Message Text

I transmit herewith for the information of the Congress the report of the Special Committee on Farm Tenancy.

The facts presented in this report reveal a grave problem of great magnitude and complexity. The American dream of the family-size farm, owned by the family which operates it, has become more and more remote. The agricultural ladder, on which an energetic young man might ascend from hired man to tenant to independent owner, is no longer serving its purpose.

Half a century ago one of every four farmers was a tenant. Today, two of every five are tenants, and on some of our best farm lands seven of every ten farmers are tenants. All told, they operate land and buildings valued at $11,000,000,000.

For the past ten years, the number of new tenants every year has been about 40,000. Many tenants change farms every two or three years, and apparently one out of three changes farms every year. The agricultural ladder for these American citizens has become a treadmill.

Numerous Farmers Of Insecure Status.

At the same time, owners of family-size farms have been slipping down. Thousands of farmers commonly considered owners are as insecure as tenants. The farm owner-operator's equity in his property is, on the average, 42 per cent and in some of our best farming sections is as little as one-fifth.

When fully half the total farm population of the United States no longer can feel secure, when millions of our people have lost their roots in the soil, action to provide security is imperative and will be generally approved.

A problem of such magnitude is not solved over night, nor by any one limited approach, nor by the Federal Government alone. While aggravated by the depression, the tenancy problem is the accumulated result of generations of unthinking exploitation of our agricultural resources, both land and people. We can no longer postpone action. We must begin at once with such resources of man power, money and experience as are available, and with such methods as will call forth the co-operative effort of local, State and Federal agencies of government, and of landlords quite as much as tenants. In dealing with the problem of relief among rural people during the depression we have already accumulated information and experience which will be of great value in the long-time program. It will be wise to start the permanent program on a scale commensurate with our resources and experience, with the purpose of later expanding the program to a scale commensurate with the magnitude of the problem as rapidly as our experience and resources will permit.

Committee Urges Four-Front Drive.

The Special Committee on Farm Tenancy emphasizes the necessity for action of at least four types: First, action to open the doors of ownership to tenants who now have the requisite ability and experience, but who can become owners only with the assistance of liberal credit, on long terms, and technical advise; second, modest loans, with the necessary guidance and education to prevent small owners from slipping into tenancy, and to help the masses of tenants, croppers and farm laborers at the very bottom of the agricultural ladder increase their standards of living, achieve greater security, and begin the upward climb toward land ownership; third, the retirement by public agencies of land proved to be unsuited for farming, and assistance to the families living thereon in finding homes on good land; fourth, co-operation with State and local agencies of government to improve the general leasing system. These activities which bear such close relation to each other should furnish a sound basis for the beginning of a program for improving the present intolerable condition of the lowest income farm families.

Health, Education Properly Emphasized.

The committee has very properly emphasized the importance of health and education in any long-time program for correcting the evils from which this large section of our population suffers. Attention is also called to the part which land speculation has played in bringing insecurity into the lives of rural families, and to the necessity for eliminating sharp fluctuations in land value due to speculative activity in farm lands.

The attack on the problem of farm tenancy and farm security is a logical continuation of the agricultural program this Administration has been developing since March 4, 1933. Necessarily, whatever program the Congress devises will have to be closely integrated with existing activities for maintaining farm income and for conserving and improving our agricultural resources.

Obviously action by the States alone and independently cannot cure the widespread ill. A Nation-wide program under Federal leadership and with the assistance of States, counties, communities and individuals is the only solution. Most Americans believe that our form of government does not prohibit action on behalf of those who need help.

Traffic Unit Asks 'Long Haul' Repeal

By the Associated Press.

J. P. Haines, Chicago, representing the National Industrial Traffic League, said yesterday that repeal of the long-and-short haul clause of the interstate commerce act would result in a "freer" flow of commerce within the Nation.

He told the House Interstate Commerce Committee that the Pettengill bill to repeal the clause had the backing of shippers from all sections of the country.

"The clause is opposed by our organization," he said, "because it affords no protection to either shippers, receivers or competing transportation agencies that is not also afforded by other sections of the interstate commerce act, in so far as the reasonable, nondiscriminatory, nonpreferential and nonprejudicial nature of rates is concerned."

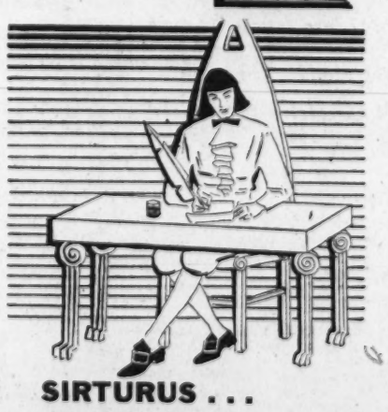
ABOUT GLASSES . . .


SIRTURUS . . .
In 1618 a man in Milan by the name of Sirturus wrote a textbook on Optics, in which he advocated the grading of glasses according to the wearer's eyes rather than according to the age of the person they best fitted. His work was most important in the advancement of Optics. In this book he complained bitterly about the inferiority of Roman and Venetian spectacle lens. He attacked them on the grounds that the grinding was very poor, uneven, and very inaccurate. His book did much to aid the advancement of Optics in the right direction. There is no guesswork in the manufacture of glasses today—they are minutely accurate.

Officers, Nurse Are Questioned In Assault Case

Mrs. Copping Reiterates Story; Says Attacker Was American.

By the Associated Press.

Honolulu, Feb. 16.—Police today intensified their investigation of the assault story told by Mrs. Bennett S. Copping, 24, wife of a naval officer, as the young woman held to her original account of the incident despite the report of an examining physician that he found no evidence of criminal attack.

Mrs. Copping, born in the Philippines, reiterated that an unidentified man grabbed her as she left her hotel cottage room about 5 a. m. yesterday, dragged her 75 feet across the lawn to a garage and attacked her.

Police Chief William A. Gabrielson said Mrs. Copping told of a drinking party the preceding day and night from which her husband retired comparatively early.

The officers interviewed Naval Lieuts. W. Johnson, of the cruiser Louisville, and W. R. Allen, of the Fleet Air Base, and Miss Dolores de Beck, a nurse.

Gabrielson said the Coppings, Johnson, Allen and Miss de Beck attended the party at Pearl Harbor Sunday; that it started at the home of Lieut. Comdr. J. H. Chadwick during the morning, and that Lieut. Chopping, commander of the submarine S-28, left during the afternoon to return to his hotel, where he "passed out."

The officer added that Lieuts. Johnson and Allen and Miss de Beck accompanied Mrs. Copping back to the hotel late that night and left her at the Copping bungalow quarters. They said Copping was asleep.

Several hours later Mrs. Copping reported she came out of the hotel bungalow to go to a washroom and that she was seized by the throat and dragged to the garage.

She said she lost consciousness but revived as her attacker departed. She said he asked, "Are you all right?" and then fled. She could not give a detailed description of him, but said he was American, dark-haired, tall and wore a gray sweater.

Dr. Henry A. Akina, assistant city-county physician, examined Mrs. Copping twice and reported he found no indication that she was attacked. A third examination was ordered.

Lieut. Copping, accompanying his wife to police headquarters, referred all questions to officers.

The Coppings have been married seven years and have a young daughter, who spent the night at the nearby home of her paternal grandmother.

Copping was graduated from high school at Antlers, Okla., and received an appointment to the United States Naval Academy, from which he was graduated in 1925.

Here's a Strange Convention— It Just Wants to Be Left Alone

No Press Handouts Nor Fanfare of Publicity as 20 Physicists From All Parts of World Convene in Capital.

Year in and year out Washington is host to conventions and conferences of every possible character, running the gamut from stovepipe hat designers to the D. A. R., but there now sits in plenary session a gathering that is totally different from any and all that have gone before.

In the first place, it is not a convention. Or even a conference. There will be no "handouts" to the press, no luncheons, no banquets.

"It is," said a spokesman for this novel phenomenon yesterday, "just an informal get-together. They will simply talk with one another and exchange opinions."

"They" are some 20 physicists from places as distant as Copenhagen who opened a six-day conversation stand in the Capital yesterday and wish only to be left alone with their quantum theory, atom smashing and nuclear structure.

While others are debating the wisdom of President Roosevelt's proposed court reforms or speculating on the Windsor-Simpson nuptials, these savants will be in retreat at George Washington University or out on Broad Branch road this week contemplating the mysteries of theoretical physics.

Some may doubt that their discusions can succeed without after-dinner stories and a committee on resolutions, but the forementioned spokesman gives assurance that such conventional accoutrements are strictly taboo. The molecules, magnetic forces, etc., must stand or fall on their own merits.

Come to think of it, the first paragraph phrase saying this huddle is "totally different from any and all that have gone before" is slightly exaggerated. Washington has been host to two comparable parleys, for this is the third annual chate session of this group of physicists.

They are sponsored jointly by George Washington University and the Carnegie Institution's department of terrestrial magnetism, which is housed at 5241 Broad Branch road northwest.

Dr. Bohr to Raise Voice.

Probably the highlight of this third seminar will come today or tomorrow when Dr. Niels Bohr clears his throat to say a few words. Dr. Bohr, a Nobel prize winner in physics, is the University of Copenhagen professor whose two-hour lecture in a Toronto auditorium one night last week was nullified by atrocious acoustics. When it was over, no one could be found who could tell what he had been talking about.

It is understood that adequate steps are being taken to prevent a repetition of this unhappy occurrence here.

The other professors to whom President Cloyd Heck Marvin of George Washington University and President John C. Merriam of the Carnegie Institution are being hosts this week are:

James H. Bartlett, of the University of Illinois, among whose specialties are quadruple radiation and nuclear structure; Gregory Breit, of the University of Wisconsin, an authority on upper atmosphere and high potentials; I. I. Rabi, Columbia University expert on quantum mechanics and molecular beams, and L. H. Thomas, of Ohio State, who has peered into the dynamics of the spinning electron.

Cornell is represented by H. A. Bethe, Stanford by Felix Bloch and Harvard by W. H. Furry. From the University of Michigan comes H. R. Crane; University of Wisconsin, E. P. Wither; University of Rochester, N. S. Plesset, and University of North Carolina, J. A. Wheeler.

F. Kalckar, assistant to Dr. Bohr, also is on the list. George Washington University's torch will be borne by G. Ganow and E. Teller and that of the Cornegie Institution by M. A. Tuve and L. R. Hafstad.

"Please stress the fact," said the spokesman, "that th emeetings are closed. They would not interest the general public. In fact, it may be said without any disparagement that many a physicist who might walk in on the meetings would not be able to comprehend what was being discussed."

Kidnap Suspect Admits Identity

Denver, Feb. 16 (AP).—Francis Leo Oley, for the first time since his arrest here January 30 as a suspect in the O'Connell kindaping at Albany, N. Y., admitted today he is Oley.

Thomas J. Morrissey, Federal district attorney, said the prisoner, who has insisted his name was Frank R. O'Neil, admitted his true identity after a chat with his older brother, Edward, of Albany.

Francis Oley is held under $100,000 bond under a Federal kidnaping charge. John O'Connel', jr., of Albany, identified Oley here as one of the men who kidnaped him in July, 1933, and held him for $40,000 ransom.

Self-Tagging Parkers Have Blues in Boston

Boston, Feb. 16 (AP).—Tag-your-self-parkers had a problem to contend with today as police switched from red to blue tags.

By the simple expedient of tagging their own cars with old parking tickets some autoists have been pulling the wool over the police eyes and leaving their cars for unlimited periods on the city streets.

Man Termed Wife-Stealer Shot to Death

Woman, Baby Also Are Dead, Police Think; Husband Proves Alibi.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Feb. 16.—A man accused of luring a woman from her husband was found dead with four bullet wounds in his head on an abandoned Delaware River pier today under circumstances that led police to believe the woman and her 18-month-old son also may be dead.

Police questioned James Adair, 26, who some time ago complained to the police that his wife had left him for Smart. They became reconciled three weeks ago. Adair said his wife disappeared last night, taking their son with her and explaining she was going to a motion picture show.

Shown a woman's hat found in a sedan near Smart's body and a woman's pocketbook that lay outside the car, Adair said:

"They are my wife's. What has happened to her?"

Detectives said that Adair, a WPA worker, had given a perfect account of his whereabouts last night and that no suspicion attached to him.

30,000 Shirt Makers Quit, Seek Pay Boost

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—Approximately 30,000 shirt makers in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Pennsylvania stopped work today as a gesture in a demand for a 7½ per cent wage increase.

Union officials said that most of the workers were expected to be back on the job in a day or so, as manufacturers have signified a willingness to meet demands of the union.

Suitor Wounds Md. Divorcee And Kills Self

Baltimore Woman Pinned by Corpse; Mystery Call Brings Police.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Feb. 16.—Police found a 37-year-old divorcee lying wounded in her home today beneath the bullet-pierced body of a 50-year-old married man in whose pocket was a hastily scribbled note reading:

"I have gotten justice and am paying the penalty."

The man was William Henry Armstrong, father of four adult children. His body was sprawled in Mrs. Leonora M. Viel's hallway, his head pillowed on her breast.

Mrs. Viel, a bullet wound near the heart, told the police she had lain there for 12 hours, pinned down by the dead man's weight. She said Armstrong had been "bothering" her for some time and shot her last night after she refused to go out with him.

He stood around watching her for some time, she said, refusing to call a doctor or permit her to rise. About midnight he fired a bullet into his temple, falling across her so she could not get free.

It was not until noon that the police, answering a mysterious telephone call, went to the home and heard Mrs. Veil inside, moaning and screaming.

"Come in, I've been shot," she cried out when they knocked.

Mrs. Veil's head was resting on a pillow she said Armstrong had brought her. Just out of reach were a glass and a cup, half full of water. The wall above her right hand showed fingernail scratches, where she had scratched and beaten against it. Her shoes were a few feet away.

The attractive brunette divorcee was taken to a hospital, where physicians said the bullet lodged near the base of her spine and had caused partial paralysis. Her condition was critical.

The note found in Armstrong's pocket was initialed, simply, "WHA." It was barely legible.

One Grading Plan Urged for Schools

Richmond, Va., Feb. 16 (AP).—The question of standard scholastic reporting systems among Class A schools was headed today for discussion at the annual meeting of the Virginia Literary and Athletic League in Charlottesville Saturday.

Floyd E. Fowlkes, faculty adviser of athletics at John Marshall High School, said he and the Petersburg High coach would seek rule revisions providing uniform reporting periods.

He contended some schools had only one report in a half semester, while John Marshall had three, which, he said, gave the other schools "a distinct advantage" under the eligibility rule requiring athletes to make passing grades on at least three subjects "on his last regular report."

2 Jailbreakers, Hungry and Cold, Return to Prison

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 16 (AP).—Two hungry, cold and footsore youths, who smashed a hole in the wall of their Spotsylvania County Jail cell February 7 and escaped, returned voluntarily to the law's custody today, being returned to the jail from which they had gained freedom.

Elmer Lloyd and Bryant Brooks, both 20 years old, told Sheriff Maxey L. Blaydes, to whom they surrendered this morning, that they had spent the time since the break "in the brush," dodging pursuing officers, eating meager "hand-outs" from farmers and sleeping in abandoned houses.

Jury Accuses Telephone Co. In Racing Case

Judge Declares Six Silent Telephones Indicated Illicit Betting.

Baltimore, Feb. 16.—Following the suggestion of Judge Eugene O'Dunne, the Baltimore grand jury returned today an indictment charging the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. with "making book" on the horse races.

The indictment was drawn up on the usual printed form in race bet cases, giving only the date of "on or about the eighth day of February, 1937." It charged violation of the law by possession of papers, maintaining of premises and other types of violations.

The grand jury's action following the request of Judge O'Dunne yesterday to Acting State's Attorney William H. Maynard to present to the body facts in the bookmaking case against William Zimmerman.

An employe of the telephone company had testified in the Zimmerman case that six silent and unlisted telephones were in Zimmerman's home or in an establishment he conducted.

Judge O'Dunne asserted that the company should have known that more than one silent telephone in a home or establishment presupposes that such telephones were to be used in illegal bets on races.

The jurist pointed out that anyone aiding and abetting in the commission of a misdemeanor is a principal in the offense in the eyes of the law.

Would-Be Bad Man Fires 1 Shot, Gun Jams; Action Begins.

Crying out, "Now I know I'm safe," and wielding a broom, Eleanor Campbell, 28, forced a colored robber to flee to the street yesterday after the gun with which he fired one shot had jammed.

The man, according to Melvin Viner, plant manager of the Arcade-Sunshine Co., Inc., 735 Lamont street, invaded the main office where Miss Campbell is employed and, menacing her with a revolver, ordered her to hand over the contents of the cash register.

When Miss Campbell told the robber that the register was empty, he leaped over the counter. At that moment some men entered by the front door and, apparently frightened, the robber rushed for the exit.

As the men attempted to tackle him, the gunman fired a shot, then pulled the trigger again. When the gun failed to explode the second time Miss Campbell jumped into the fray.

The bandit fled to the street, where he rejoined a companion at the wheel of a running convertible coupe. According to Viner, the car bore a Virginia license tag.

A headquarters cruiser, as well as five squad cars, responded to the alarm turned in by Viner.

Owner of Grocery Is Robbed by Bandit

Harry Kartofel, 634 Second street southwest, proprietor of a grocery store at his home, was robbed of $10.12 early yesterday by an armed colored man.

Kartofel told police the colored man entered the store brandishing the gun and threatened his life if he made any outcry. The bandit scooped the money from the cash register and escaped.

Chicago, Feb. 16 (AP).—President Robert M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago, announced an unrestricted gift of $275,000 to the institution from the Rosenwald Family Association on the condition the university raise not less than twice that amount from other sources.

Dental Chair Pain Is Just Imaginary, Asserts --- Dentist

Chicago, Feb. 16 (AP).—A lot of people won't believe him, but Dr. H. W. Oppice insists it's mostly imagination you feel when the dentist goes to work.

To overcome it, Dr. Oppice, teacher in the dental department of Loyola University, said today at the Chicago Dental Society convention, dentists are using psychology and technique—70 per cent psychology and 30 per cent technique.

"Actually there is very little pain in modern dentistry," he said. "The virbation of the drill gives a sensation which registers fear in the brain, but the anticipation causes more pain than the operation.

"Fear of the dentist is inherited—a fear of the unknown—and it is magnified by education in the home. Parents who have been to the dentist and discuss their experiences cause much of the fear in children."

Mrs. D. A. Jarman Burial Set Today

Requiem mass will be said at 8:30 o'clock this morning in Holy Trinity Church for Mrs. Daisy Allen Jarman, 31, wife of Walker L. Jarman, an employe of the Potomac Electric Power Co., who died in Georgetown Hospital Monday. Burial will be in Mount Olivet.

For 11 years Mrs. Jarman was employed in the sales department of Peoples Drug Stores.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Jarman is survived by four sisters and four brothers. They are Mrs. Catherine Donohue, Mrs. Helen Zimmerman, Mrs. Delores Kingman and Eleanor, Grafton, Hector, Ernest and Edwin Allen.

Officer Is Freed In Fatal Shooting

Policeman Alfred L. Embrey, of the Second Precinct, was exonerated and complimented for his bravery yesterday by a coroner's jury after an inquest in the fatal shooting of George E. Harris, colored, 22, 621 Second street northeast.

Harris was shot and killed early Sunday morning when he was surprised by Embrey "stripping" an automobile in the rear of the 1200 block V street northwest.

Quezon Plans Tariff Parley With Roosevelt

Philippine President Sees Open Door Policy as Beneficial to U. S.

By the Associated Press.

Manuel Luis Quezon, president of the 15-month-old Philippine Commonwealth, is coming here next week in an attempt to get the United States to keep its gates ajar for Philippine products.

The Philippines independence act now provides that the American tariff gates shall close against Philippine sugar, coconut oil and other goods when the islands become an independent nation in 1946.

Quezon is expected also to discuss other insular and Far Eastern affairs with President Roosevelt and other high officials, though the emphasis will be on trade. He maintains the Philippines question is far from settled. Tariff barriers would mean ruin to the Philippines, more headaches for the United States, and loss of an export market worth $61,497,263 last year, he contends.

Quezon's hopes have been buoyed by President Roosevelt's observation in urging Congressional approval of the independence act that "where imperfections or inequalities exist, I am confident that they can be corrected."

Filipino leaders also point to a new tariff commission report on Philippine-American trade. The commission found the islands had profited more than the United States from their commerce, but said the independence act's economic terms would bear heavily on Philippine industry and added "it is not certain that adequate provision has been made for a transition period sufficiently gradual."

Accompanied by his military adviser, Maj. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the Army's former chief of staff, and 23 others, Quezon reached Los Angeles from Manila Sunday, and headed for New York before coming here.

Officially he comes merely to discuss the agenda for a later general economic conference, which is to recommend to Congress possible changes in the independence act and a reciprocal trade arrangement.

ADA and Park Funds Left in Supply Measure

Appropriations for the Alley Dwelling Authority and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, as voted by the House, were left intact in the independent offices supply bill reported yesterday by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

These items amounted to $893,700 for the planning commission to resume its park expansion program, while the ADA authority merely permits the agency to use unexpended appropriations and receipts from leases and sales. This will amount to about $161,000 for the next fiscal year.

Motors Firms' Names 'Rigged' Stock, Is Claim

Authority Lacking, Assert Witnesses in Hutton Inquiry in Senate.

By the Associated Press.

Witnesses told the Securities Commission yesterday the names of Fisher Bodies and Chrysler Corporation were used without authority to boost Atlas Tack Corporation shares.

It was brought out, however, that associates in the two motor firms personally bought blocks of the stock in 1935 and that the stock was turned over almost overnight at large profits.

The Securities Commission is seeking to bar W. E. Hutton and Co., New York Stock Exchange member, from the financial markets on the ground the firm "rigged" Atlas stock.

George R. Barton, of Detroit, stock and bond trader for the Fisher interests, said he acquired 1,000 shares for himself and 5,000 shares for the senior investment company, personally owned by Fred C. Fisher. He sold his own stock a few days later, he said, at a profit of $3,300.

"Mr. Fisher, he declared under examination by Jacob Gruber, commission counsel, "never told any one to use his name in connection with Atlas stock."

Eugene L. Reason, of Detroit, assistant purchasing agent for Chrysler, testified he bought 1,000 shares of Atlas on November 14, 1935, on advice of a representative of Hutton and Co. and sold it two weeks later at a profit of $6,000.

Another witness, Sidney Rheinstein, a New York Stock Exchange member for 35 years, testified he was told about the same time by Carroll V. Geran, a Hutton floor member in New York, that Detroit automobile manufacturers were interested in Atlas and that it was a "good buy."

Herds Die on Canada's Snow-Covered Ranges

Calgary, Alberta, Feb. 16 (Canadian Press).—Dead horses and cattle dotted the rangleads of southern Alberta tonight as ranchers battled to get feed ad water to the sarving herds.

More than 40 days of sub-zero temperatures, with snow piled high over the grazing grounds, brought about the ranchers' crisis.

Bequests Left to Friends and Employes in Will of Capital Financier.

The late Karl William Corby, Washington financier, left an estate valued at more than $110,000, according to his will, which was admitted to probate on the Orphan's Court at Rockville yesterday. The will was executed June 25, 1936, and named his wife, Mary Graff Corby, and the Riggs National Bank as executors.

After leaving several personal bequests to friends and employes, ranging from $500 to $10,000, the will directs that the palatial Corby home on Edson lane, in Montgomery County, together with the extensive grounds and all household and personal effects, should be given to his wife.

The personal bequests were: $5,000 to Thomas P. Bones and $1,000 to Harry T. Peters, both friends, and $10,000 to his secretary, Kathleen B. Stiles; $1,000 to his chauffeur, Frank Colleli, and $500 each to four other employes, Christian A. Heineken, Gustav Heller, Helen Brooks and Carolina Altpeter, providing they are still in his employ.

Ring for Son.

The remainder of his estate, according to the will, will be held in trust, three-quarters of the income to go to his wife and one-quarter to his son and his daughter, Mary Ellen Corby, and their heirs.

Upon his wife's death the residuary estate will be divided among their heirs and held in trust until they reach the age of 30 years. Provision also is made for income from the estate reverting to his mother, Hattie L. Corby, in the event of the death of his wife and other heirs.

Schools Mentioned.

The will provides that in the event of the death of his wife, his children and their heirs and of his mother, that one-half of the estate shall go to the Central Dispensary and Emergency Hospital, Washington; the Children's Hospital, Washington, and All Soul's Protestant Episcopal Church, Chevy Chase, in equal shares, and that the remaining half shall be divided equally among four educational institutions, the University of Pennsylvania, George Washington University, Lawrence School for Boys, Lawrenceville, N. J., and the Ogontz School for Girls, Montgomery County, Pa., to be used for general educational purposes.

Bonnet to Offer War Debt Plan, Writer Says

Paris, Feb. 16 (U.P.).—Fernand de Brinon, leading French financial writer said in an article in L'Information last night France and England will pay 50 per cent of their war debts if the United States guarantees them economic aid in event of a war with Germany.

De Brinon said he had learned "on the best authority" the proposal would be set forth by George Bonnet when he reaches Washington as a special French envoy.

Plan Proposed To Kill Racing Bill in District

LaRoe Suggests Adding Clause for Licensing Bookmakers.

Wilbur La Roe, jr., chairman of the committee on civic affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches, has suggested to Representative George J. Bates (Republican), of Maine, that he could kill the Norton bill to legalize racing in the District by adding an amendment to license bookmakers.

In a letter to Bates, La Roe said in part:

"The suggestion has come to me that one of the most helpful steps that could be taken in fighting this measure is the introduction of an amendment to license the bookmakers. Some of those familiar with the gambling game tell me that this would be a very effective deterrent."

La Roe explained last night to The Post that he meant that such an amendment would kill the enthusiasm of the persons financially interested in the track because with licensing of books the track's potential revenue would be cut considerably. He said he also thought such an amendment would also lose votes for the bill in both the House and the Senate.

La Roe's letter concluded thus:

"We are much disturbed about certain information that reaches us. Apparently there are powerful and sinister influences at work and it is my personal opinion that the measure has a better chance of passing than is commonly thought. A good many people who are relying comfortably on the belief that "such a terrible bill" can never pass, may be doomed to disappointment unless the forces who are opposed to the bill marshal their strength. I agree that it is a terrible bill, but I am also convinced that we are up against an awfully strong political combination which may include some people pretty high up.

"What concerns me most about this whole situation is the hold which the gamblers are getting in the District of Columbia. I mean no reflection upon our very efficient Police Department when I say that they have not been able to overcome the numbers racket. Gambling is a breeder of other crimes. Horse racing here would unquestionably increase greatly the amount of gambling and the amount of money spent foolishly instead of being spent with our local merchants."

Panhandle Swept By 'Dust Blizzard'

Guymon, Okla., Feb. 16 (AP).—Grizzled Panhandle farmers, stung by two successive "black blizzards," dug in tonight for a finish fight as a vast red dust storm swept toward the Gulf of Mexico.

Repeating their blowlands philosophy—"let 'er blow, it takes grit to live here"—the farmers assembled their engines of war—giant listers, "chisel" plows and terracers to groove the shifting top soil in hard ridges.

The new "black blizzard," second of the season, struck the Panhandle today—this year's focal point of dusters that have been felt in parts of Colorado, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas.

Visibility dropped to 125 feet here and to less than a block at Boise City and Texhoma. Wheat began to blow out.

From Texas and Cimarron counties in the Oklahoma Panhandle came requests for more Government aid in the war on dust.

Teacher Sues Man, 50, For Breach of Promise

Northampton, Mass., Feb. 16 (AP).—Miss Florence Moses, 32, Mount Vernon, N. Y., high school art instructor, testified today in her breach of promise suit for $25,000 against Louis A. Levin, 50, local druggist, she was "very much shocked" at his marriage to Mrs. Elsie Blanc, former wife of his partner.

The teachers' college graduate testified she rode with Levin to Northampton in a roadster with the temperature 20 below zero and that he "managed to keep me warm."

While a dinner guest at Levin's home, the teacher testified, Levin became amorous and bit her on the neck.

Dinner bells lured the young sitters home defeated, but today Higgins received a $5 check from Clyde W. Blakeslee, of Chicago, and instructions to have "the kids come in and fill up."

Banker Loses $500,000 Suit In D. C. Court

Demurrer of Defendants Is Sustained in 'Malicious Prosecution' Action.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts in District Court yesterday dismissed a $500,000 "malicious prosecution" suit brought by Col. Wade H. Cooper, one-time head of three Washington banks, against a group of District and Federal officials who he charged had prosecuted him when there was no basis for prosecution.

The action came in the form of the sustaining of a demurrer filed by those named as defendants. They were: J. F. T. O'Connor, comptroller of the currency; F. G. Awalt, deputy comptroller; Robert C. Baldwin, receiver for the Commercial National Bank; George P. Barse, Treasury Department attorney; Gibbs Lyon, of the Treasury Department; Samuel C. Simon, a special agent of the Department of Justice; Leo A. Rover, former United States attorney for the District, and Irvin Goldstein, a former assistant United States attorney.

Cooper, former head of the Commercial National Bank, the Continental Trust Co. and the United States Savings Bank, charged there was a plot afoot to prosecute him back in 1933. However, Justice Letts held that the officials all acted within their official capacities and all were acting in good faith when the charges against Cooper, later dropped, were originated.

The decision yesterday refused to permit Col. Cooper to amend his suit to meet the objections of attorneys for the defendants. Even so, it was said, the militant banker, now in Florida, plans to appeal the dismissal to the United States Court of Appeals.

Norton Presents 5 District Bills

Five District bills requested by the District Commissioners were introduced in the House yesterday by Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee.

They are:

A bonding system for gasoline importers who collect the District tax; penalties for non-observance of orders of the joint board of the District Commissioners and the Public Utilities Commission; a requirement that all persons who practice law in the District be members of the District Bar; an amendment which specifies the weight of small packages of coal, and a nursing requirement to treat the eyes of new-born infants to prevent blindness.

Pennsylvania Senate Favors Court Revision

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 16 (AP).—The Democratic Senate passed over Republican opposition last night a joint resolution asking Congress to enact President Roosevelt's proposed reorganization of the Federal Judiciary.

The measure, offered by Senator Edward J. Thompson, Center County Democrat, was sent to the House.

Helen Keller To Visit Orient To Help Blind

Noted Lecturer Plans First Pacific Voyage to Aid Handicapped.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 16.—Imbued with her late teacher's admonition to "carry on," Helen Keller planned tonight to sail for the Orient April 1 to "give a word of encouragement to the blind and handicapped" of the Far East.

The internationally famous author-lecturer, who has crossed the North Atlantic numerous times, never before has turned her sightless eyes toward the setting sun over the Pacific.

The trip will be made in response to pressing invitations extended by women's clubs and educational authorities in Japan. Accompanied by her ever present secretary, Miss Polly Thomson, she also may visit Korea and Manchukuo before returning late in June.

Trip Long Delayed.

"She has always wanted to do something for the blind in the Far East," Miss Thomson said. "There is so much to be done."

They planned to make the trip more than a year ago, she said, but were prevented by the illness of Mrs. Anne Sullivan Macy, who died last October after devoting 50 of her 70 years to teaching Miss Keller some of the beauties and the knowledge of a world which her afflicted protege could neither see nor hear.

Miss Thomson, her voice still rich with the burr of the Scottish highlands despite her years of service in Miss Keller's Forest Hills home, said they spent most of the time at her brother's home in Scotland.

Invitation Declined.

"We are so very busy that I had to write and decline an invitation for Miss Keller to speak before the South Carolina Legislature in Columbia next month," she said, "so that we could get ready for the trip to Japan. We sail from San Francisco on the Asama Maru April 1, and probably will visit most of the large towns in Japan."

Meanwhile they are "working away" in the comfortable brick home on Long Island. Miss Thomson is serving as eyes and ears for her 56-year-old companion.

specific capital-gains tax on sales of lands made within three years from purchase date and amendment of both the Federal farm loan act and the emergency farm mortgage act to limit loans for land purchase to farmers or farmers-to-be.

State Proposals Listed.

Proposals for State action included:

Improvement of lease contracts and landlord-tenant relationships by enactment of State legislation to provide for more equitable and better balanced leases and settlement of differences by local arbitration boards.

Safeguarding of civil liberties of tenants, farm croppers and farm laborers with State guarantees of the rights of peaceful assembly and of organization to achieve legitimate objectives.

Advancement of rural education and health facilities.

Long "Abuses" Cited.

Throughout the general and broad discussion of these detailed aims, the committee's report emphasized the insecurity of the present farm tenant through the accumulated "abuses of two centuries."

The report, based on the premise that "fully half the total farm population of the United States has no adequate security," outlined the committee's objectives along the lines of the President's words:

"The American dream of the family-size farm, owned by the family which operates it, has become more and more remote. The agricultural ladder, on which an energetic young man might ascend from hired man to tenant to independent owner, is no longer serving its purpose . . . The agricultural ladder, for these citizens, has become a treadmill."

After a close examination of the decline in farm ownership, revealing that tenancy has increased from 25 per cent of all farmers in 1880 to 42 per cent in 1935, with the equity of operating farmers in their lands now little more than 20 per cent, the report said:

"Approximately one farm family out of four occupies a position in the Nation's social and economic structure that is precarious and should not be tolerated."

Attacks Tenure Policies.

Citing repeated agricultural depressions, aggravated by severe droughts, as equally to be blamed for the present situation as the unbalanced land tenure system, the report criticised American land tenure policies of the past in terms of what has happened to the Nation's chief natural asset, the soil. The correlation between soil erosion and tenant occupancy is very striking . . . Erosion of our soil has its counterpart in erosion of our society. The one wastes natural resources; the other, human resources."

"More than a third of 2,865,000 tenant farmers of the Nation in the spring of 1935 had occupied their present farms only one year."

This constant forced movement of large blocks of the population is reflected in the low living standards of millions, the report asserted. In outlining its objections to a mere easy credit system, which possibly would favor absentee owners, the report pledged the committee's purpose and stated its beliefs as:

"It is not an impossible task for a Nation as large, as rich and as progressive as this one to work out a set of relationships which will assure farmers fair security in the occupancy and operation of farms, freedom from undue restraint and exploitation, and a reasonably adequate livelihood; and which will assure the Nation maintenance of its natural resources and increased stability and enrichment of its rural community life."

O'Neal Dissents.

Several members of the committee dissented from certain of its findings and recommendations. These were headed by Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, who refrained from signing the report for several reasons, including his disapproval of "the principle of withholding the transfer of title to any purchaser who is able to pay the principal indebtedness for which he obligated himself at any time he is able to make payment."

Charles S. Johnson, professor of sociology at Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., expressed himself in full accord with the report, but asked that the program be accompanied by safeguards to insure the full inclusion of colored persons in the benefits.

W. L. Blackstone, of Wynne, Ark., representing the Southern Tenant Farmers Union, agreed generally to the report, but urged the setting up fo the Farm Security Administration outside of the Department of Agriculture, supplementing this with a charge that the Department has been dominated "by the rich and large land-owning class of farmers and their political pressure lobbies."

"Democratic" Selection.

He also asked that county agents and county boards be selected from owners and tenants on the "democratic" principle of representation according to numbers involved.

Henry C. Taylor, director of the Farm Foundation of Chicago, Ill., urged that the entire proposal be treated as strictly experimental, suggesting that the recommendations contain the possibility of doing more harm than good to the farmers of the country.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace was chairman of the committee of 41 members, including representatives of labor, farmers, Government departments, publishers, extension directors, educators and economists.

Details of Bazooka Contest To Be Given in Friday's Post

Barrels of Fun and $100 in Prizes Are in Store for Boys and Girls Who Enter Bob Burns' Simple 'Musical' Game.

Calling all boys and girls, calling all boys and girls.

The big Bob (Bazooka) Burns—Washington Post Bazooka Contest will be announced in Friday's Post with all the details. All that can be told right now is that $100 in prizes of various sorts will be awarded—and there'll be more fun than that barrel of monkeys we've all heard so much about.

In the meantime, the picture above shows what happened when Paul Whiteman took up playing the bazooka. Bob Burns is the best natured fellow in all the world. But when Paul Whiteman, whom everybody knows is a violinist, picked up Bob's bazooka and played it beautifully—well, Bob just stuck his fingers in his ears to make Paul believe he wasn't very good.

As a matter of fact, every boy and girl can play the bazooka. It's just as simple as romping up and down the scale on a kazoo.

So—don't fail to see The Post Friday morning and read all about the big bazooka contest. The contest will be staged in a downtown theater. With $100 in prizes. Don't miss the details in The Post Friday morning.

Lone Survivor of Queens Chapel Tragedy Will Receive $90,000.

A father's berserk killing of three members of his family left the sole survivor of his tragedy, a daughter, heir to most of a $100,000 estate yesterday.

Six days before Corbin E. Boarman, 65-year-old retired telephone company employe went suddenly mad at his home on Queens Chapel road just across the District line in Prince Georges County and systematically killed his wife, son and a daughter, he made out his will.

Under its terms all but $10,000 of his wealth was given to his wife, Anna Frances, 60, and at his death, to his children, Margaret, 26; William Francis, 21, and Mary D. Boarman, 25. That was on January 6.

On January 12 Boarman's mind suddenly snapped. One by one he killed Mrs. Boarman, William and Margaret. Before killing himself, he also made an attempt on the life of Mary Boarman, but she survived her wounds and after a few days in Sibley Hospital, returned alone to the family home.

Yesterday Attorneys Ralph Powers and Walter L. Green, of Hyattsville, filed for probate in the Orphans' Court at Upper Marlboro, Boarman's will. Filed with the will was a petition asking appointment of Mary Boarman as administratrix of the estate. The petition was granted.

Of the estate's approximate $100,000 value, $90,000 is in personal property—stocks in building associations, bank deposits and real estate notes. The value of the home and grounds on Queens Chapel road was set at $10,000.

All of this with the exception of $10,000 invested in the Northeast Building Association, Inc., will go to Mary Boarman, under the terms of her father's will and under the macabre circumstances of his executions.

Congressmen 'Trapped,' Says N.I.P.A. Head

Tasks Much More Complex Today, F. W. Davenport Tells Diplomats.

The changing character of Congress was the keynote of an address delivered last night by Frederick M. Davenport, chairman of the National Institute of Public Affairs, before members of the Diplomatic Corps and Washington's foreign colony at American University.

His speech was the third on the political institutions of the United States given under the auspices of the university in Hurst Hall.

Tasks of Congress are vastly more intricate today than they were half a century ago, Davenport asserted.

"Today," he said, "the member of Congress is caught in a trap. He is a victim of the size of the country, the size of the House, a victim of modern inventions, of rapid transportation and communication.

"Half a century ago," he continued, "things were simpler. Constituents, delegations and pressure groups of every name and nature did not pour in upon a helpless Congressional member."

Rumanian Premier Tells Envoys Not to Meddle

Bucharest, Rumania, Feb. 16 (AP). Premier George Tatarescu warned envoys of Germany, Italy, Japan, Portugal and Poland today that Rumania will not tolerate their mixing in internal affairs of this country.

His admonition was made before parliament. It was in answer to a question whether the attendance of those ministers at the funeral Saturday of two members of the illegal iron guard who were killed fighting for Spain's Fascists "is interference which can remain without consequence."

One Dead, 2 Hurt In Virginia Crash

Lynchburg, Va., Feb. 16 (AP).—J. A. Patton, 58, Vinton, Va., was dead and two other persons were in a Lynchburg hospital today, the result of an automobile accident 3 miles north of Altavista, Va., last night.

The injured were Mrs. R. Elizabeth Brim, 23, of Altavista, and James Lynch, 19, of Vinton. The extent of their injuries was not immediately determined.

Officers said the car in which the three were riding collided with another machine and overturned.

Eagle Alights on Wire, Power Service Halted

Killdeer, N. Dak., Feb. 16 (AP).—An American eagle chose a high tension power line as a perch today and five communities were deprived of electricity during the breakfast hour.

Linemen found the service short-circuited by the carcass of the bird which had a wing spread of 6 feet and 4 inches.

Grade Crossing Dangers.

Motorists who drive to Gibson Island and the vicinity will visualize vividly the scene of the latest grade crossing accident. Dorsey, Md., is on that spur off the Baltimore pike which boasts not only the unprotected crossing where two lost their lives Monday and another open railroad crossover, but also the absurdity of a bridge across the tracks of an abandoned electric railway.

Bitterly for the engineer and van driver who died in the crash, but happily for the rest of the motoring public, an underpass is now nearing completion at Dorsey, which will rid the town of its dangerous death trap. A public works project at Rockville has similarly rid that town of its hazard of tragic memory. Throughout Maryland, in fact, grade crossings are giving way to safe underpasses or bridges, thanks to the State's share in the $200,000,000 Federal fund set aside to combat the danger of unprotected railroad crossovers.

Two hundred million dollars might seem to the layman ample to eliminate all grade crossings. The fact is, however, that the National Resources Board once estimated that $12,000,000,000 would be needed to obliterate every one. Grade crossing accidents, then, while on the decrease, are not yet near an end. It will still pay to "stop, look and listen."

Moving Day.

Moving vans have just finished carting household goods from 145 Piccadilly to Buckingham Palace. Great Britain's first family left their comparatively modest home Monday for the more ornate chambers befitting their new station. As if the problem of managing 10 servants were not enough, the Queen now finds 140 additional ones on her hands. And while the King is in the parlor, it will be his wife's job to transform the imperial palace into a cozy spot.

However, it is not hard to imagine the former Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon going about her domestic duties quietly and efficiently. She has already installed her young daughters in nursery quarters on the second floor and apparently everyone is doing as well as could be expected. But one example of her excellent management stands out which should make her the envy of housewives the world over. And that is the fact that the King and Queen had dinner guests the same day they moved into a new home!

The Discharge Book Conflict.

A number of vessels engaged in the intercoastal shipping trade have been held up by the refusal of seamen to accept the continuous discharge books which they are required to carry under the provisions of the Copeland safety-at-sea act. Harry Lundberg, of the Sailors' Union of the Pacific, is leading the fight against use of the discharge book and is reported to have received promises of support from Secretary of Labor Perkins. As a result, the situation has become extremely tense and a new wave of strikes and tie-ups threatens the sorely tried maritime industry.

Opposition to the discharge books is based on fear that they will be used to blacklist union leaders or any group which has incurred the displeasure of the shipping companies. There is nothing in the form of the books, however, to warrant such assumptions, since they provide only a factual record of employment and a means of identifying their holders.

Of course, there is always a possibility that such knowledge may be used to "spot" so-called troublemakers, and thus facilitate plans for blacklisting them. However, the mere possibility that a much-needed reform may be abused would not justify failure to correct the intolerable conditions that have grown up in the American merchant marine as a result of traffic in fake discharge papers. For years spokesmen for the seamen have sought protection against the loose hiring practices that have enabled untrained and incompetent men to displace qualified seamen on our merchant vessels. The use of continuous discharge books is, in fact, a protection to competent seamen as well as a most essential safeguard of lives and property on the high seas.

The Department of Commerce is rightly aroused by the movement now on foot to suspend or repeal the requirement for continuous discharge books, and is taking steps to force compliance with the terms of the law. If there is any proof to support the claim that the new books lend themselves to blacklisting plots, it should be brought forward, and specific recommendations made for correcting defects in the system. If, however, Mr. Lundberg and his followers object to any system of certain identification of seamen merely because it might interfere with their own plans and policies, their complaints should be disregarded.

Any desirable changes in the law can be made without surrendering the safeguards provided by the system of continuous discharge books. To repeal the law would certainly be a backward step.

A Thorny Problem.

Steps taken recently to "sterilize" gold imports were designed to prevent the new acquisitions from swelling bank reserves and expanding an already excessive credit base. There was nothing in this action to prevent or discourage the continued receipt of foreign funds for investment in American securities. Furthermore, the protection which the "sterilization" plan provides against credit contraction in case of heavy gold withdrawals would not safeguard the security markets against the deflationary consequences of a sudden "dumping" of foreign-owned stocks and bonds.

Total foreign investments in the United States are thought to be close to $8,000,000,000 at the present time. They have been increasing at an abnormally rapid rate. During the past year it is estimated that over $400,000,000 net of foreign capital entered the country for investment and almost as much arrived in the form of short-term balances.

For some time the Treasury officials and the Federal Reserve authorities have been worrying about the effect of this concentrated foreign buying upon the domestic stock and bond markets and considering plans for checking it. Discussions now in progress, participated in by Secretary Morgenthau, Chairman Eccles, of the Reserve Board, and Chairman Landis, of the SEC, indicate that positive action will shortly be taken to that end.

Until details of the projected plan are known discussion is necessarily confined to consideration of the wisdom of any kind of intervention. From some viewpoints, it is undoubtedly desirable to place a curb upon the steady inflow of foreign funds under present abnormal conditions. Foreigners are acquiring American stocks and bonds in large quantities not by shipping us needed goods and supplying us with useful services, but by sending us vast quantities of gold that is not only useless to us but actually considered so dangerous as to call for its "sterilization."

Anxiety is increased by the knowledge that these capital movements are largely the result of the disturbed political state of Europe. Thus, there is created an unstable and concentrated demand for American securities that stimulates speculative activity. The longer this activity continues the greater the danger of a collapse of values in case of any sudden or concerted effort to liquidate foreign security holdings.

Such fears may easily be exaggerated; indeed Secretary Morgenthau himself was disposed to decry them a short time ago. But the desire to keep out unwanted gold and the wish to anticipate an unsound boom both constitute reasons for discouraging foreign buying on a large and expanding scale. In taking steps to counteract undesirable developments, however, the Treasury and Federal Reserve officials run a grave risk of introducing new disturbances as bad or worse than those they seek to avert.

For instance, a punitive tax levied on the capital gains of foreign investors might precipitate the "dumping" the authorities wish to prevent. Even heavy stock-transfer taxes, or drastic increases in taxes on foreign income from American holdings, could induce retaliatory legislation very injurious to American investors with foreign interests.

Generally speaking, any proposal to place fresh obstacles in the way of the free flow of capital between nations runs counter to the efforts that the State Department is making to liberate international trade from the restraints of high tariffs, quotas, and exchange controls. Capital movements, like those of goods, are needed to provide for a balance of international payments. And while this balancing function has of late years been lost to sight, new disturbances will notwithstanding be created by putting artificial impediments in the way of capital shifts.

From the long time viewpoint, indeed, the present capital inflow may prove to be an important aid to effecting a balance in our dealings with other countries. It seems highly probable that much of the invested funds of foreigners will remain in this country for an indefinite period. That being the case, the debit items representing interest due foreign investors will help to offset sums due us from abroad and to lessen the anomaly of a creditor nation trying to sell more goods than it buys.

Whatever remedial action is decided upon, therefore, the authorities should keep in mind that ultimately there must be a free movement of capital, as well as goods, to assure stability of the exchanges and assist restoration of normal trading relationships.

District Speed Laws.

In the police court Judge Hitt has questioned the judgment of traffic officers who arrest motorists for barely exceeding speed limits. And, salting his actions with his words, he has taken the personal bond of a driver haled before him for driving 28 miles an hour in a 22-mile zone. The thousands of Washingtonians who know full well that they might easily have been that driver will rejoice in his clemency.

Not so, however, the authorities charged with enforcing the traffic regulations. A car going 28 miles an hour in certain neighborhoods, they claim, is as dangerous as one registering 40 along less crowded thoroughfares. More than that, they point out that the law is the law and that it is their business to enforce it. The latter argument is impossible to refute.

However, a law that lacks public—to say nothing of judicial—support is an absurdity. Evidently needed is a set of speed laws for the District which are both reasonable and consistent. As it is, a driver is liable for arrest when he exceeds the speed limit by as much as five miles an hour in some sections of the city; in others, he may generally ignore the law to the extent of 10 miles an hour. There is little sense in this. And until the local traffic code is revised and uniformly enforced, the public will tend to side with Judge Hitt in his leniency.

Belated Non-Intervention.

Six months ago the Blum government, torn between its sympathies for the Spanish Popular Front and its fears that the civil war in the Iberian Peninsula might spread to the rest of Europe, proposed a general non-intervention agreement. Only now is there any real likelihood of this agreement being carried out in spirit and in letter.

What makes this new development possible is the sudden about face of Italy. And it seems more than a coincidence that Mussolini's whole-hearted acceptance of the plan effectively to isolate the Spanish civil war occurs at a moment when the outlook for the Madrid government's forces is very dark and the outlook for the rebels correspondingly bright.

During the past six months both Italy and Germany have given only lip service to the "hands-off-Spain" agreement. For tactical reasons they have participated in the futile labors of the London non-intervention committee. Rome and Berlin have sent polite but evasive replies to the pleas of Great Britain and France urging that the loopholes in the non-intervention agreement be plugged up. They accepted that idea in principle, but bound it up with so many conditions that delay was inevitable. Delay, it is clear, was part of their game.

Only a few weeks ago Italy even signed a Mediterranean agreement with Great Britain pledging respect for Spain's territorial integrity. This was almost immediately followed by the landing of a large contingent of Italian troops at Cadiz, and these "volunteers" have been followed by others. Their participation made the capture of Malaga, as the Italian press itself boasted, an Italian victory.

With the fall of Malaga, with the partial success of Gen. Franco in isolating Madrid, with Russia becoming cold to the Madrid regime, its prospects seem increasingly dubious. The tide may turn again as it did at the gates of Madrid. But such miracles do not frequently repeat themselves. Even without any additional aid from the Fascist powers, Franco now has the upper hand. Therefore, it would be advantageous to him, rather than a handicap, to enforce a drastic non-intervention agreement by means of a sanitary cordon maintained around Spain.

It is a cynical solution, if solution it is, of the Spanish problem. It foreshadows another victory for Italy, and a dubious position for France, threatened with virtual encirclement by a ring of Fascist states. Even if Franco is again held up there is no certainty that the impending plan worked out at London would be loyally carried out. The evidence that it is contingent on the overthrow of the Madrid regime is too strong.

The Spice Of Life.

William Green doesn't like the idea of being expelled from the United Mine Workers, of which he has been a member for 47 years. "It's a form of Hitlerism," he says of the doings of his rival, John L. Lewis.

Mr. Green's resentment is understandable, although the action of the U. M. W. in the Green case has a suspicious resemblance to that of the A. F. of L. in the C. I. O. case. But as a general rule it would be more impressive if labor leaders, politicians and writers of letters to the editor would show some variety in their analogies. This business of dragging in Hitler and Stalin to point a moral and adorn a tale can be easily overdone. It makes for monotony. The woods are full of autocrats, past and present. Why not a little ingenuity in their citation?

Has everyone forgotten Nero? And poor old George III? And Gessler, who was so rough with William Tell? And Herod, Metternich, Ghenghis Khan, Napoleon and the Duke of Alva? Behind these are dozens and dozens of only slightly inferior flowers from which to cull rich roses of comparison.

Variety, as Mr. McGuffey, of the famed McGuffey Readers, used to tell his ardent scholars in the days when Mr. Green was getting his first union card, is the spice of life.

Something tells us that you have a better chance of overtaking happiness if you'll pursue it on foot.

The American Dictionary.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The review by Joseph Tausek, of the new "Dictionary of American English," in your issue of February 14, seems to me to convey a wrong impression of the importance of this work. There is the implication, for example, that 10 years have been spent in compiling the 116 pages (Part 1—A to Baggage) of the dictionary so far published. As a matter of fact, the dictionary has been in progress since 1925, but that includes work on the entire undertaking; there will be about 20 parts in all, aggregating probably 2,000 pages or more.

The dictionary is being issued under a formidable sponsorship—the University of Chicago, the General Education Board of New York, and the American Council of Learned Societies—which perhaps challenged your reviewer into his adverse pronouncements, which unfortunately turned out to be, it seems to me, an inadequate and superficial review.

The value of a good many pieces of literary research is certainly questionable, but if there is any undertaking that justifies ten years and more of the time of literary scholars (with the help in this case of many volunteer assistants), it would seem to be this American Dictionary, the value of which is bound to increase, as has that of the comparable Oxford English Dictionary, with the years.

The scope of the new dictionary is stated by the editors to include "not only words or phrases which are clearly or apparently of American origin, or have a greater currency here than elsewhere, but also every word denoting something which has a real connection with the development of the country and the history of its people." That to me is more than justification for the huge task of compilation that this dictionary entails.

Prohibited Horrors.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Charles A. Dana, who was accounted a great editor in his day, was a lover of good English. He is reported to have posted for his young men a list of prohibited horrors.

Could not The Post establish such a list? Here are candidates: "this date," "this impedimenta," (a faint but proud reminiscence of high school "Caesar"); (The National Geographic Magazine had "this regalia"); "flaunt" for "flout," (F. D. "flaunts" the court).

H. V. Morton also is guilty of this rash attempt at classicism in his popular "Footsteps of St. Paul."

Why not institute a fine for barbarisms, a double fine for those accompanied by a show of learning?

District Relief.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Although there are as many unemployed in the District of Columbia as has existed at any time since the depression has begun, the measures taken to alleviate this condition have been entirely inadequate. In spite of the fact that the cost of living in the District is the second highest in the country and some 3 per cent higher than New York City, the wage scales for WPA and relief are in the No. 2 region.

Of those unemployed through no fault of their own only a small portion designated as unemployables get relief with no provisions for those who are able to work. In spite of these meager provisions, already lay-offs have begun on the WPA and a tapering off of those receiving relief. There is no provision made for supplementary relief of large families on WPA. The administrative staff is utterly inadequate to take care of all the cases applying for relief. The case workers are handling a case load of 123 cases, whereas in New York 60 is a maximum. As a result many applicants are waiting as long as a year before being acted upon.

Highway Safety.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is only natural that many people, alarmed at the rising flood of motor vehicle accidents, should begin to chant a litany of despair.

Without minimizing the seriousness of this problem in any way—for it is indeed serious—a fair analysis is bound to reveal many hopeful signs.

While it is true that all types of accidents increased during the last year, these increases were accompanied by even larger jumps in "exposure" which leaves solid ground for the belief that when the country once more is definitely on the high road of prosperity, with employment and automobile travel at fairly constant levels, the accident totals will shrink rapidly in the face of intelligent safety work now being carried on.

As for motor vehicle accidents, they experienced a rise of 4 per cent in deaths last year—a smaller increase than the death toll in the home, in occupational pursuits and in public accidents other than motor vehicle tragedies.

It is interesting to note, too, that 20 States with standard drivers' license laws had but a 1 per cent increase in traffic deaths compared with a 7 per cent jump in States without such legislation.

Surely there is encouragement in the fact that 8 of our 13 largest cities actually reduced traffic deaths last year—with New York saving 116 lives! Pueblo, Colo., with more than 50,000 people, had but one auto death in 1936; six in 1935. West New York, N. J., 38,300, was the largest city to go through the year without a death. For nearly five years now there have been no traffic fatalities in Cloquet, Minn., 7,000 population. Many small communities in the 10,000 to 25,000 population group finished the year with a clear record.

Never before has there been so much interest in drivers' license legislation. At the present time we are working with officials, leading citizens and interested groups in 24 States where it is planned to enact standard laws or strengthen present weak laws. I look to see at least 15 States pass such legislation during the next few months and it is only a question of time until every State has a standard law.

Child Marriage Laws.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The current child-marriage furore, occasioned by the marriage of a 22-year-old mountain boy to a pre-adolescent girl, promises to be followed by some lawmaking to set the lower age limit for persons considering marriage.

Anyone who has read "Mother India," which depicts vividly the results of the custom of giving very young girls in marriage in that country, is certain to deplore it.

The marriage of girls below the age of 17 or 18 is certainly not the best thing in the world. And when they are as young as 9, and still playing with dolls, certainly something should be done about it.

We have grown so contemptuous of Nature as to boldly dam her rivers, cut through her mountains, keep warm in the winter and cool in the summer, to make our own artificial sunshine, and to successfully defy her gravitational law by flying at great heights above the earth. Why not go on? Why not take up boldly with old ignorant Mother Nature this habit she has of maturing youngsters before they are ready to marry? There lies the real solution of the difficulty.

The passing of bans against child marriage is likely to have three results: a higher rate of illegitimate births, more young men in the country's reformatories, and more "ruined" young girls.

A Jefferson Memorial Academy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an age where some are wont to sneer at the processes of democracy, we turn to this subject of a national memorial to Thomas Jefferson with the assurance that the ideals for which Thomas Jefferson lived are deeply anchored in the American people themselves. They are a living example—a living memorial to his greatness!

Those who would build memorials to Thomas Jefferson and his democratic principles must build them perpetually. This, I take it, is so fundamental, when we consider this problem, that at the outset we can in all justice say, no memorial in brick and stone and mortar, however vast, could do lasting honor to this creative genius and distinguished patriot. The best that we as a people can hope to do is to build something beautiful and do something beautiful in his name. Beauty has an imperishable quality.

Here, then, is my suggestion, offered not in pride, but in humility, for the good of all the people: Let us establish the United States Thomas Jefferson Academy, a school of political economy, dedicated to the principles of democracy, and international peace.

The best choice we could make in setting the initial plans in motion for the academy would be to locate a piece of land along the Potomac River, and there establish its first department—the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Auditorium. This would be the very heart and center of the entire project. From this beginning the United States Thomas Jefferson Academy could grow, in due time on a par with West Point and the United States Naval Academy.

As the institute of political economy and world peace took form it would be in accord with the plan to name various related buildings in the new group in honor of Jefferson's great associates here and abroad who helped make democracy safe in the New World. Such a fitting coalition of interest would harmonize with the breadth and integrity of Thomas Jefferson for he scoured the far ends of the earth to enhance his learning that the Republic might live forever.

If we neglect to carry the torch which Thomas Jefferson entrusted to our care our days of misery will be quick upon us and our shame shall fade into the blackness of night, from which mankind will lift itself only with great difficulty, if at all. We must build, with the ideals of the American Commonwealth ever before us, where privileges and plunder are unknown, and where democracy, economic and political, is not the exception, but the rule. The United States Thomas Jefferson Academy will help set the standards, where our youth will learn the arts of government, from which flow good will to all the world. LOUIS BESSEMER.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Vat-Men.

IT is a shock to read in the sport pages that the fine old art of the dry-dive has been renounced by the Louisiana Prize Fight Commission and classified as dastardly conduct. It has been only a little over three years since I bade a reluctant farewell to the ringside to turn cosmic, and I am afraid I did not leave the prize fight profession in safe hands. In my day and time, as old Senator Jim Watson would say, the splash-man occupied an honorable if humble position in pugilism, and many an illustrious champion was indebted to the faithful tanker for his advancement in life. The public also owed him thanks for many happy moments.

Now it appears that a tanker imported to Baton Rouge from New York to take a plunge for Jack Torrance suffered a change of heart, or at any rate some disturbance in his heart, and refused to put on the sprawl at the last moment. As you may imagine, great consternation ensued when it leaked out that there had been collusion afoot, because Baton Rouge is the capital of Louisiana and unaccustomed to subtlety.

Of course, the statesmen of Huey Long's regime did not hesitate to pick up a few honest dollars here and there—for they do not have any prudes in politics in Louisiana.

* * * *

They believe in harmless mischief, and were complimented when the late Senator gazed out over the sea of fine, intelligent faces in the lower house of his Legislature one afternoon and remarked that he could buy and sell them like so many sacks of potatoes. Perhaps it should be mentioned just in passing that in the Louisiana Legislature, as indeed in most State Legislatures, the term "lower house" is merely a figure of speach. Neither house is actually any lower than the other.

Jack Torrance was Senator Long's pet athlete, who performed many prodigies in his time, and recently turned to professional pugilism. He won a few slashing contests and seemed to be well on his way to win the fairest bauble in Fistiana's realm—or, anyway, the runner-uptcy—when the New York vatman, or diver, came to town under a variety of names, with written instructions to go in the water in either the first round or the second. The tanker was faithless to his mission, however, and went out the window shortly before ring time—a course of conduct which called for official inquiry.

The State Prize Fight Commission exonerated Mr. Torrance, but imposed a fine of $300 on each of three others, including the tanker. It is not quite clear whether they fined these sportsmen for the connivance or the tanker's failure to go through with his mission.

The Louisiana commission, being political and composed of Louisiana politicians at that, probably takes a little too serious view of the offense in any case. In Baton Rouge, where the sense of public duty is at its highest, they may have placed a sinister interpretation on something which was merely unfamiliar but not bad.

My goodness, I hope this does not mean that the tribe of dry-tank men has been moved into general disrepute while my back was turned on pugilism these last few years. There were many gifted performers in my time, and the specialty was so highly respected that people sometimes would prefer a brodie, or splash, in one round to 15 rounds of scientific boxing by two little lean bodies trained to the pink of condition, as the saying goes.

* * * *

A good, reliable diver is a valuable man in the career of an aspiring pugilist and may also be very helpful to a champion who has arrived. We had a bantamweight champion some years ago who carried a tanker on a tour of the Middle and Southwest, boxed him 19 times in 18 cities, put him in the water every time and returned home singing the praises of his spaniel to one and all. The tanker fought under 18 different names. The reason he used only 18 names in 19 fights was that the citizens of Hot Springs clamored for a return match and got it. He was a very calm, surefooted waterman, always up on his signals, and a nice easy bleeder—which made for realism. I suppose you could go so far as to call him a champion tankman.

Can't anyone explain to the Louisiana commission that they are blotting the escutcheon of a venerable and honored phase of pugilism?

The President's Ideals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If we ever want real prosperity back again the ideals of President Roosevelt must be followed. The old system of working the people long hours at small wages is out of tune at the present time. A six-hour working day (36 hours weekly) would put many to work and positively will spread prosperity beyond imagination.

The downfall of the Roman empire was the hoarding of gold. It is often a proven fact that some people with fortunes left behind them actually died of starvation. Fear grows so strong at times that rich or well-to-do people will go hungry for the sake of hoarding. As long as President Roosevelt was backed by the greatest majority of Americans his ideals deserve the same backing. ALBERT BAJTAY.

BOOKS

A Mid-Week Review of Current Publications

A Humorless Dickens

By William Rickel

THERE is a note in "Song of Friendship" that comes from the same chord as that in Hans Fallada's "Old Heart Goes A-Journeying." Both stories occur in Bavaria; both deal with peasants and their simple but joyous life; both have elements of realism and fantasy.

Kellermann's novel has all the elements that you find in the great novels of history—a variety of characters from the normal dumb and the normal brilliant to the psychopathic man with the maimed body, a consummate handling of a number of themes, a willingness to bite into the toughest facts, unflinchingly, and so on. But "Song of Friendship" lacks stature. And because part of greatness and universality finds its expression in excess (the excess of size, the excess in form as when the artist boldly introduces new methods of writing, excess in putting down the antipathies of spirit and body), Kellermann's story falls short of that which we may call first-rate.

Criticism in German is interdict; only the description of works of art is allowed. This is only natural in a totalitarian state; for surely it would be unwise to let a new thought creep into a society where one master prescribes both the form and content of life. It naturally follows that insofar as a creative writer tends to criticize his times he will run afoul this censorship; for art in a sense is the criticism of life. Have not Feutwanger and Mann and Renn all fled this suffocation.

• • • •

EVIDENCE of the destructive influence of Hitler's edict is plain in both these recent German novels. It is especially apparent when you know how much livelier and broader was the scope of these writers before Nazism came into Germany. Their escape from these restrictions is twofold. Fantasy takes the field, as in the fairy-like league of the children of Unsadel in Fallada's novel, where they band together against the status-quo stupidity of their parents, though the author fails to push through the social criticism of his creation by having the parents finally relent under pressure and become benign dictators.

The further repressive power of the totalitarian view of art is seen in the complete absence of matters political and social: the problems of youth, the pressure of unemployment, the post-war (in Kellermann's case) inflation in Germany. Only the purveyors of thin sophistication, to borrow a figure from a prpfession at which even dictators wink, is unaffected by the Nazi esthetic.

• • • •

"SONG OF FRIENDSHIP" tells the struggles of five friends, having returned from the front-line trenches to Born, a farm which one owns in Hellsee, to rebuild it after a fire destroys it. On a thin line of courage and steadfast faith that unites the fight of the five friends Kellermann has knotted the whole sentimental series of narrative setbacks: inability to get credit for seed, attempted suicide of Karl, who was blinded in the trenches; the niggardliness of relatives, the disappointment of Herman, who owns Born, when Christine elopes with play-boy Dr. Alexander and marries him only to leave him just before her child is born, and so on.

So closely does Kellermann intertwine the threads of most realistic events and characterizations with wild improvident fortitude and unselfishness that his ideals of neighborliness always fall short of sentimentality: it is the boundless realism of Dickens without his humor; it is almost the naturalness of James T. Farrell without his social vision. For these reasons "Song of Friendship" will give thousands of readers an exhilarating sense of the livableness of life without adding a whit to their knowledge or to the scope of their experience—all because the decisive problems and hinging factors have been retained in the totalitarian sieve of the censor.

THESE criticisms come of our regret that a man of Kellermann's talent must disappoint us in action. He has been known to English and American readers since 1915, when "The Tunnel" was translated. That novel, concerning an engineer's attempt to dig a tunnel from Europe to America, was followed by "The Brothers Schellenberg," in which Kellermann sets a communist-idealist over against his brother, a calculating speculator who, at his brother's death by bullet, takes over his brother's agitation! Responsive in this novel to the ferment of Germany after the depression of the early twenties, Kellermann paints in the soft tones and harmonies of youth against a dark background of social criticism; but then ends on that impossible note of reformation of the speculator brother.

In justice we must add that Kellermann was never born to be much more than a competent craftsman and journalist in his fiction. In his latest novel he drops out the great social changes he no doubt felt and leaves only his ability, his warmth, his mastery of narrative technique, his ability to pull together a hundred odd strands into one pattern, his kindly tolerance for pettiness—all which avails nothing if the whole man is not there ceaselessly.

Scene in Bavarian Mountains.

A Family of the Frou-Frou Era

Author Raises Curtain On Rococo Scene Of 1904.

By Mary Barrett.

In Virginia, especially along the Eastern Shore, the early settlers developed a rather curious type of architecture: a main building with wings connected, not by the ordinary hallway or "dog-run" passage, but by rooms that were practically wings in themselves. Myron Brinig's novel, "The Sisters," is constructed in somewhat the same way, and the result is not so much a novel as three novelettes bound together by a thread of family relationship.

Louise, Grace and Helen Elliott are sisters, but the story of each is a separate "wing" with Louise's part probably the central and most important one. For some hundred pages the family background brings them together and, throughout the book, the lives of the father and mother, certain inescapable common experiences make them a unit.

Blood relationships have furnished the background for some of the world's greatest dramas and for a few important novels. The family group is particularly tempting to the writer with a sociological thesis, as it is subject to all human complications, all kinds of social interactions, with a few ingenious and extra-damnable ones (according to a recent school of psychology) peculiar to it alone. Mr. Brinig did not choose to avail himself of any of these advantages.

The Elliott sisters live their lives far apart, geographically and spiritually. This separation is emphasized by the division of the novel into sections: a first book devoted to each of the three, followed by a second book continuing the life of each. The publisher's note points out that the book might as well have been called "Three Cities," as the action takes place in Silver Bow, Mont., in San Francisco and in New York.

The prologue explains that the Elliotts belong to the first Roosevelt era, that "the heart, the core of their story is not 1936 or even 1926 but 1904." Silver Bow of that period emerges clearly, but without the singing vitality and breezy courage of "Singermann," or perhaps that earlier novel by Mr. Brinig seems in retrospect to have had more gusto than it would on a second reading.

"The Sisters" is meticulously objective, but comes alive only in spots. Even the San Francisco earthquake is disposed of in surprisingly mild fashion. Saratoga of that glamorous, if vulgar, day is better done; it, in fact, provides one of the most exciting bits in the book. The "golden tempestuous Helen . . . not deep enough for love" attends the races with her elderly but wealthy husband Sam, "with his bald head damp from excitement and his round sherry-red cheeks that were like small fruit pies pasted on to the structure of his head." (Meticulous objectivity often seems to give this effect of strain.)

MYRON BRINIG.

The crowd gathered at Saratoga, the "queen of all racing cities," is described with flamboyant color and in lavish detail:

" . . . painted hags with strings of pearls about their decaying throats and diamonds on their rotted fingers; the liquor-colored faces of touts who were dressed in loud-check suits, with diamonds big as nuts pinned to their stocks . . . little jockeys, thin and dieted, like male dolls, mature of face and adolescent of physique . . . large puffing Madams from New York bawdyhouses with brooches as searching as locomotive headlights . . . Saratoga exhibited everything but what was quiet and normal."

By far the most serious story is that of Louise, oldest and most beautiful of the sisters. She had intelligence and refinement; marries two of the most interesting and essentially civilized men in the list of characters; survives grief and hardship, and remains a reasonable, useful, attractive woman. In her marriage with Frank Medlin, once-ambitious drunken newspaper man (dangerously near a stock character); in her separation from him, and through the simultaneous shock of earthquake; in her later marriage to Aaron Benson, a successful merchant, Louise is the medium for emotion more profound than is either of her sisters.

However, it is Grace, "the plain one," who performs perhaps the most unusual feat of all. Not only does she stay in Silver Bow, marry the town's bovine banker, but, in business-like fashion, she rids herself and her husband of the blonde milliner who threatened the family reputation and lusterless calm. A luncheon in which the hostess has invited three other "victims" of the charming Mrs. Knivel, with the purpose of organizing a sort of union to outwit the lady, is a bright device and the author handles the scene neatly and without emphasis.

"The Sisters," on the whole, is disappointing. It is a panoramic picture of that lost paradise, America before the war; but, while the affairs of the Elliotts are told in detail, the spirit of the time escapes. Perhaps this is intentional, to prove Mr. Brinig's point that "for all I know, they may be just as typical of China or Singapore." They probably are, as they are fairly stereotyped characters without any considerable importance as individuals. The objective writer pays this penalty—his story is as interesting as his characters—unless by skillful choice of episode and contemporary public events and temper, he gives his people universal meaning and, through them, insight into the life of the world in which they grew.

Three Sisters Lived In Age Of Innocence Before War.

Needless to say, a more distinguished prose style might have made memorable the story of these three lives. Mr. Brinig's prose is certainly not bad, though it tends to verbosity and flat tiresome sketches. Annoying, too, is the deliberately nostalgic tone of the novel; the reader is never permitted to forget that all this happened long ago when buggies were used instead of automobiles. Constantly he is drawn back from the story as a reality by a reminding phrase such as, "this was before . . . " or "this was in the time when . . . " If only Mr. Brinig could have gone back to the Silver Bow of 1904, instead of looking, a little wearily, back upon it.

Spade's Proper Name

By Don. K. Price

A BOOK jacket with the color scheme of a circus advertisement and the blatant appeal of a confessions magazine, combined with a text full of all the short, bad words left over from Anglo-Saxon and some long ones recently concocted by psychologists, will surely make the latest crime book by Courtney Riley Cooper a sizzling seller. "Here's to Crime" is out now, and if it fails to set the squeamish on their ears and awaken breathless interest among those who like to be shocked by tough language in the drama or the novel it will not be the fault of its contents.

Mr. Cooper, who used to write circus stories for the Saturday Evening Post, has not forgotten how to use gaudy prose. Furthermore, he has been impelled by the gravity of his subject to put on paper those things that every police reporter knows, but is restrained by journalistic propriety from printing. But the force of his method does not impair the essential soundness of his observations, nor the breadth of his understanding. He offers far more comprehensive remedies than either sentimentalism or psychology to the national malady of professional crime.

THE urgent problem is that, in spite of "this drivel that crime does not pay," it is America's biggest business. Over three and a half millions of our citizens are engaged in it. The first step to the solution of this problem is to remove the glamor that a misguided public has thrown over the professional criminal, and to demonstrate the sordidness of his character and operations.

"Here's to Crime" minces no words in such exposure. In spite of the great public interest in the private lives of gun molls, he calls them "nothing but a selfish, lawhating, pig-like crew of filthy-minded sluts." Calling veneral diseases by their one-syllable names, he denounces the hypocrisy that refuses to recognize and combat them while blandly referring to their harvest of crime and death as fruits of "the speed of our modern age." And he states with horrible clarity the crazing effects of the drug marihuana which can be grown in any backyard, and finds its readiest market in high schools all over America.

While thoroughly shocking his readers, he blames them and not merely crooked cops and gangsters for the prevalence of crime. In spite of the intricate and Nation-wide organization of professional crime, he contends that "the criminal does not exist who can defeat honest and efficient law enforcement." Public indifference permits the corruption of local police, and allows such corruption to co-operate with a great army of crooked politicians, bondsmen, fences and jackleg lawyers. Approval is given only to the Federal enforcement agencies, in particular J. Edgar Hoover and his G-men.

THE author does not blame merely those directly connected with criminals. He denounces the complacent buyers of stolen goods, the insurance companies that act as fences by recovering "the bonds from underworld sources" to save loss from robberies, the pulpit "skyriders" and the reformers who mix prudery and emotion where cold understanding and strict law enforcement are needed, and the "fat-busted old pelicans," the social workers, who weep over those who murder without provocation.

But his righteous and realistic wrath does not result merely in a proposal of more electrocutions and fewer paroles. Poverty and slums, he contends, are important contributory causes of crime. "As long as persons must live four and six to a room, with the law constantly pounding on their door to swell the arrest list for the annual police report . . . with bitterness rampant, with illness and death a constant ogre," crooked politics and crime will last.

Arnold Bennett once commented that it was strange how often the bitter realities of life bear out the ominous warnings of Puritan morality. On a similar point of view Mr. Cooper bases the fundamental challenge of his book. Although he recognizes poverty as a source of crime, and public indifference and sentimentality as a contributing factor, he looks to an even deeper cause. And he cries out against the decline in strict family morality, and the growth of avarice and desire for worldly pleasures, in uncompromising terms that would be considered ridiculously strait-laced and old-fashioned in the average "liberal" pulpit today.

• • • •

"IT must be wonderful to go places and see things and have all the money you want and buy clothes and have automobiles." You'll hear this, says Mr. Cooper, "from hard-boiled hussies who'd roll you for a two spot . . . and if you know crime and where it feeds, it will not be at all humorous." This avaricious vanity he links with less family control: "when one finds a professional criminal, it is to be supposed that parentage, for any one of numerous reasons, has in a degree failed."

The author says that he is "little more than a seasoned reporter." If this is true, it is a tribute to the reporter's profession, for he has written a jeremiad that should shock the smugness out of those who consider that our public ills should be discussed only in terms of economics, law or partisan philosophy.

"Here's to Crime" is rough reading. It is blatant and deliberately sensational. But it reveals a national sore that America will refuse to acknowledge and cure until the bandages of prudery and false liberalism are rudely jerked away. And it proposes to apply the cure to the very sources of infection with a ruthlessness that is sure to make the patient wince.

"The Marriage of Nicholas Cotter" is a London drawing room novel about a lot of nice, well-bred English people who are all polite to each other. Nicholas Cotter wanted to get married and his sister Zoe objected. The title of the book gives you a strong hint as to which was the victor in the conflict.

As the case is presented, Zoe has every reason to object to her brother's marriage. Not only has she kept a perfect house for Nicholas, spurred him on when his ambition flagged and made a sure place for him in society, but at one time she even gave up a contemplated marriage of her own at his request. Although one feels that this must have been a pale passion, to have been so readily set aside, the fact remains that Zoe did practically everything that Nicholas asked of her.

Although the plot of the story is slight, the author has a pleasant, straightforward style that makes the book good reading. The narrative moves along through a series of interesting anecdotes and the dialogue is good. Of the characters, Zoe is the most fully and realistically developed. The author lets you see how her superficial life has sapped her emotional reserves, and that her attempts to prevent her brother's marriage are based solely on selfish motives. As for Nicholas himself, he is almost too good to be true. Firm, kindly, rich, handsome in spite of his 49 years—it is no wonder Judith learns to love him so quickly! RUTH MONTGOMERY.

Looking back from a vantage point some 20 years removed, wartime prejudices, intolerance, hysteria, fanaticism, all take on a rather incomprehensible aspect, probably because the impelling emotional stimulus is remote, dull, half forgotten. But Mr. Heth has succeeded remarkably in bringing forward to consciousness something of those less praiseworthy traits of human nature which most of our memories must admit were present then.

"Grandpa" Tellinger for a number of successive terms had been the beloved mayor of a big Mid-Western city (and surely Mr. Heth won't be annoyed if Milwaukee insists on suggesting itself). His household was one of those oases of the old German culture and customs that inspired the admiration of a citizenry whose antecedents were not so purely nor directly derived.

It is a pathetic story, this drama of a bewildered, benevolent old gentleman who finally succumbed to disappointment and the pressure of forces which he could never understand, let alone cope with. But it is simply and beautifully told from the point of view of the little grandson, Leo. Mr. Heth thus puts across significances which the reader himself must draw from an objective recital of the events—a style that has a particularly strong appeal these days of analytical approach.

"PROFITS ON HORSES," by Robert S. Dowst.

It is a fair guess that the ambition to beat the races was a human trait even in those days of the rollicking chariot affairs in ancient Rome's Coliseum.

And on the day that prying archaeologists decipher the hieroglyphics on the papyrus in the vest pocket of some mummified railbird as that late gentleman's pet system of playing the galloping steeds, well, it will probably occasion no surprise.

As old as racing itself, doubtless, is the history of systems for beating the races. By mathematical calculations, by expert handicapping, by methods of progression and, yes, even by crystal-gazing the devotees of systems have attempted to foretell the order of the finish but system players are still the reigning delight of the bookmakers.

But now comes "Profits on Horses," the latest Robert S. Dowst offering on the turf, trumpeting a new method of reaching the pay-off window. This book attacks the business of gainful betting on the racing steeds by a coldly scientific method in which the monster Greed is as a monkey wrench hurled full into the midst of the geese of the golden eggs. It is a lesson in patience which Dowst seemingly proves is no less a jewel than consistency itself and perhaps even more profitable.

To the race bettor intent on a "killing," the Dowst system is entirely untenable, predicated as it is on small but steady returns and the suppression of the human temptation to "plunge."

Taking as his text an old bookmaker's observation that the way to bet on winners is to play winning horses, the author has presented the results of his own six-months' trial of the system and shows 85 winners for his betting efforts on 192 horses, or a percentage of 44 per cent. His is a modification of the progressive system, increasing his bets only moderately after a losing wager, and retrenching after a winner.

Runaway

"THE RUNAWAY," a Victorian story for the young, by G. Raverat. (Macmillan, $2.50.)

This enchanting story is an authentic nineteenth century tale with block engravings by G. Raverat that keep the reader chuckling from cover to cover. The characters are introduced in a captivating semi-circle on the back and fly leaf and appear throughout the pages, adding immeasurably to the charm of the book.

The story concerns the romantic Clarice who conceals Olga, a 13-year old runaway, and experiences the most delicious adventures in spite of the agonies of a well-trained conscience, before Olga's Highland father returns from leading a Forlorn Hope in India, and rescues his Shirley Templish wonder child from the terrors of a dark closet.

One cannot help wondering how the monosyllabic youngsters of today will receive this book, wherein the erudite Clarice reads Tasso and holds debates with herself over the ethics of falsehood versus loyalty. But it really is a grand story, and I am inclined to think that the more intelligent of them will absorb it at one sitting, and chortle with their delighted elders.

As the illustrator says in the preface, it is not really old-fashioned, nor pious, nor sentimental, nor frightening. If poor Miss Simmonds is startled by the ghost, the reader is not, for he knows perfectly well that Olga has escaped from her closet again.

There is a strain of the humor and unassailable logic of Lewis Carroll in passages like the following:

"Never mind," replied Clarice; "we all speak gibberish to others, I think, when we say what we really feel."

"I feel very sleepy," said Olga, "but that is not gibberish, it is?"

"No," said Clarice, smiling, "because I am sleepy too; when people feel alike they don't talk gibberish."

Two Colored Midshipmen May Be Named

'Skullduggery' Is Charged by Mitchell in Flunking of His Appointee.

Representative Arthur W. Mitchell, of Illinois, only colored member of Congress, after charging "skullduggery" in the flunking of James Lee Johnson, jr., colored midshipman at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, said last night that within ten days he would appoint another colored youth to the academy.

And if Johnson is forced out of the institution the Representative will appoint two colored boys, he said. He already has one vacancy and if the demand for Johnson's resignation or dismissal is made effective he will have two. He said he will be careful to appoint only boys who can enter on their records, without examination, "so there will be no chance of getting rid of them that way," he added. He said they would not be Washington boys.

Mitchell carried to President Roosevelt yesterday his protest against the dropping of Johnson, Capital student. While declining to discuss the nature of his conversation with the President, the Representative told newspapermen Johnson was being "railroaded" out of the academy.

He said he intended to continue his fight to save Johnson, his appointee, and revealed the youth had not left the academy with the 135 white members of his class who had been found deficient in their studies. Pending outcome of Mitchell's protest, he is remaining at the institution.

At the White House Mitchell exhibited a brief case which he said was "full of evidence of skullduggery" in the Johnson case. Johnson had three years of schooling at Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland, Ohio, where he was an honor student.

"First," said the Representative, "they said at Annapolis that he was deficient in deportment. Next he was given low marks in English and history, and now they discover that his eyesight is bad."

Mitchell revealed that on December 2 he had wired a protest to Rear Admiral David F. Sellers, superintendent at the academy, against low marks given to Johnson. On December 4 he went to Annapolis with a stenographer, he said, and took a stenographic record of an examination into Johnson's case.

"His marks were satisfactory at Christmas time," Mitchell said, "because he was given the full two weeks' leave. The midshipmen are not given that unless their grades are satisfactory."

Johnson lives at 1737 S street northwest here.

Mitchell said he had appointed a white youth, Gilbert Reed, of Chicago, to Annapolis, and Reed is in good standing at the academy. He has appointed two colored youths to the Military Academy at West Point, and they are preparing now for entrance examinations in March.

Mae West Becomes Gem Trader; Justifies Title of 'Diamond Lil'

Sets Aside One Day a Week for Deals; Guards Always Nearby.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 16.—Quietly, lest there be "a little trouble up at my place," Mae West is adding authority to her title, "Diamond Lil."

She has been buying, trading and selling diamonds.

She has calipers, forceps, small carat-scales, a jeweler's vise, chamois bags, plenty of black velvet trays, .. powerfel electric lamp, and two or three of those little magnifying glasses that you screw into your eye like a monocle.

Thus armed, she takes on all who come with diamonds to sell or trade.

One day a week—she won't say which—is set aside for these excursions into the shifting winds of trade. To her apartment—which is bolted and barred with contraptions designed to keep a door from opening—come the merchants or their agents.. During negotiations, "some of the boys" are always close at hand in the other rooms.

Sometimes, the movie actress said, she is interested in trading.

She knows diamond trading is a game of skill but she employs no expert witnesses, has no special counsel. It is entirely a contest between her wits and knowledge of stones and those of the man on the other side of the table.

MAE WEST.

"Gold goes up and down and so does everything else. But there'll always be dames wanting diamonds, and guys to buy them for them," she said.

Adults Still Growing at 40, Smithsonian Scientist Finds

Dr. Alex Hrdlicka, chief anthropologist of the Smithsonian Institution, who recently reported on the steady growth of brains and heads through adult life, now has concluded that men and women in their thirties, or even forties, still are adding to their heights.

Although it is accepted generally that the human male literally is "tops" at the age of 24, the thousands of measurements Dr. Hrdlicka has studied lead him to believe this is a fallacy.

He found that among men of all races the legs and trunks kept on growing far into maturity. It seems also that the hands and feet of both white Americans and Indians tend to become larger during the adult years, this growth possibly being relatively greater than that of the whole body.

Close-fitting shoes worn by the whites, especially the women, hindered the foot expansion investigation in this quarter. Dr. Hrdlicka had better luck with Indians, being able to determine that squaws' feet grew more than braves'.

"There is a universal notion," said the scientist, "that when the adult stage of life has been reached all growth of the human body and its parts, except in bulkiness, has been accomplished and henceforth ceases. The very definition of an 'adult' is 'a person grown to full size and strength.'"

Basing his research not only upon soldiers in the Civil War, Dr. Hrdlicka says with confidence:

"There now exists sufficient evidence to show that the growth and development of the body as a whole and of many, if not all, of its parts is not fully accomplished by what is generally regarded as the reaching of maturity, but proceeds more or less into the adult stage. Not all the parts advance at the same rate nor equally as long and there are considerable individual variations."

When science establishes satisfactory norms of growth for the individual organs, medicine as well as anthropology will have taken a significant step forward, Dr. Hrdlicka believes. Besides being one of the world's foremost anthropologists, he also is a doctor of medicine.

Then, perhaps, scientists may know what can be done about people like Robert Wadlow, the 18-year-old giant of Alton, Ill., who now stands 8 feet 3¼ inches tall and is still growing.

Charter Topic Of Women at PressLuncheon

Issues at stake in the current conflict between women's organizations regarding the recently formulated Women's Charter were discussed yesterday by Mary van Kleeck, chairman of the advisory committee on research of the Women's Charter Group, in a speech before the Women's National Press Club at its weekly luncheon at the Willard.

Terming the charter "a call to unity," presenting an opportunity for women's organizations to iron out their differences on feminine rights and protection, Miss van Kleeck said its purpose was to "find the areas of agreement" between women's groups rather than to point up differences between them.

"The charter is already the subject of wide-spread discussion by women in industry, the professions, and other occupations and by women's organizations in the United States and in Europe," she said. "Sponsored as a tentative draft by 20 women active in organizations in this country and issued two months ago with an invitation to all interested organizations to cooperate in studying its divisions, the charter is intended to be a basis for unified action to obtain full political and civil rights for women and full opportunity in education and in work."

Basis of Resolution.

It will be the basis for a resolution to be presented at the International Labor Conference under the auspices of the International Labor Organization of the League of Nations in Geneva in June, she further explained.

The Women's Charter Group is now setting up a provisional organization which forecasts the organization to be formed by delegates from organizations indorsing the charter's objectives, declared Miss van Kleeck. She pointed out that publication of the charter has stimulated discussion of whether legislation applying to women only with respect to conditions of employment handicaps them in opportunity for work.

"Opposition has been expressed on the ground that the charter makes for discrimination against women because it supports special protective legislation that applies only to women workers, thus setting them apart from men workers," she went on. In answer to this argument, she stressed that "the charter does not recommend any specific laws. It permits legislation applying to women only if the experience of the women themselves in the occupations to be covered and the general legislative situation in the Nation require it. At any time it would be consistent with the charter to take the position that such legislation should be promoted for all workers, and not for women only."

In this conectnion she pointed out that the time has come when wage-earning women and women who labor in the homes without wages must represent the force leading all women. "These are the ones who recognize that special protective legislation for feminine employes is often necesary, and that its advisability must be determined in each industry by the women in that industry."

Articulate opposition to the charter has come chiefly from the National Woman's Party, which upholds unqualified equal rights for women with men in all walks of society, in all branches of industry.

Another guest at the luncheon, Mrs. Helen Hunt West, editor of Equal Rights, official magazine of the National Woman's Party, at the close of the meeting engaged in a heated discussion with Miss van Kleeck on the subject of the charter, and stressed in the course of the argument that "protective legislation for women" indorsed by the charter, tends to set women apart from men in industry and thus is discriminatory.

Farmers Fight Plan to Alter Supreme Court

vote, that of Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho.

Both opponents and adherents of the President's plan claim they may gain a strategical advantage by Senate passage of this bill, already approved by the House. Proponents say it is a necessary prelude to the President's bill. Opponents say it might induce some Supreme Court retirements, diminishing pressure for the President's plan.

Senator McAdoo's radio speech last night, in which he dismissed "pack-the-court" charges as "unworthy of consideration," was the third broadcast in the Administration's radio campaign of defense. Attorney General Cummings spoke Sunday night, Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, Tuesday night, and Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, will speak tomorrow night. At his press conference yesterday, President Roosevelt said he personally had no plans to go on the air at present.

"Will End Delays."

McAdoo said it was his desire and the President's desire to "effect a more expeditious disposition of litigation" and expressed conviction that the Presidents' plan will "put at rest the prevailing criticism of the law's delays."

The Californian contended it was the "high duty" of Congress to provide a sufficient number of judges to insure prompt justice for litigants, and said he saw no reason why the Supreme Court should be excepted from efforts to increase the personnel of the entire Federal bench.

Like previous Administration speakers, McAdoo denied that President Roosevelt is susceptible to what he called "dictatorial rabies."

"There is no occasion for apprehension or hysteria about the performance on the part of the President of his duty in nominating judges for the courts of the United States whenever that responsibility confronts him," McAdoo said.

Challenges "Sacred Nine."

He asked if there was anything so "sacred" about the figure "nine" that the court should forever be confined to that number, asking: "Is this an unreasonable or unjustifiable increase?"

"It is my profound conviction," he said, "that the number of judges of the Supreme Court is insufficient to enable the court, industrious and able as it is, to render the complete service required for the administration of justice."

He concluded with a plea that the President "be trusted to use the great powers of his office for the advancement of democracy and for the welfare of the people of the United States."

Senator Van Nuys, opposed to the President's court plan, and Senator Thomas, of Utah, for it, spoke over another network.

Van Nuys, who will move in the Senate Judiciary Committee to "split" the President's bill, said the measure's admitted purpose "is to change the complexion of the courts." He said he cannot go along with such a proposal, although he favors the other suggested reforms, looking to more speedy and uniform procedure in cases involving constitutionality of Federal statutes.

"Let us meet the issue frankly and above board and not seek to camouflage it with a mass of technical reforms with which we are all in sympathy," the Indianian said.

"People Should Decide."

Van Nuys argued that the Supreme Court may have been ultra-conservative in its decisions on some Federal statutes, but under the tripartite distribution of powers the court has its own field, and any change should come "in the regular, constitutional, American way—by the people themselves."

"No thinking citizen would countenance the placing of the Constitution on a parity with ordinary legislative acts which are altered, amended or repealed at the pleasure of Congress," Van Nuys said.

He said the Supreme Court has been "the pivotal point" on which the rights and liberties of the people, the States and the Federal Government itself have turned.

Senator Thomas said the whole discussion was another "tempest in a teapot." The Utahan said he saw nothing drastic in the President's proposals, and declared the court "must be brought again to the place where it can work in a positive way for the people in meeting 'the various crises of human affairs.' "

Urges Simplest Way.

Adjustment of the Constitution, Thomas argued, should be brought about in "the simplest way," and he said he regarded a constitutional amendment as "the hardest way and the longest way."

"The ability to declare laws unconstitutional is a process of which I approve, but it has been abused, and every student of history knows it," he said.

Thomas said that "of course" the suggested reforms will not become law in every detail. But if they did, he insisted, the Supreme Court would still be the maker of its own rules of procedure, and would still remain its own judge of all matters relating to judicial review.

He said America would become a "dictatorship" if the President coerces Congress; would become "mobocracy" if Congress plays out of bounds; and would become an "oligharchy" if the Supreme Court annexes legislative powers. But he added that "none of these situations is going to endure," and declared that not to support the President's aims "is to be out of harmony with our times."

With yesterday's statement by Senator George that he will oppose the President's plan, the tally of Senators publicly committed on the issue virtually balanced. Privately, opponents of the plan now claim they have 37 Senators who will conduct a "last ditch" fight, and 45 Senators who would oppose the plan if the vote were taken today.

Senator George's statement was brief.

"I have not hesitated," the Georgian said, "to say to all those who have written to me that in my opinion this particular recommendation of the President (appointment of six new justices) is unwise, and that, if approved, it will impair the independence of the Federal judiciary.

"In the long run, a court free from both Executive and Congressional domination, will be found more useful to the people than the immediate enactment of any legislative program, however desirable. A subservient judiciary is worse than no judiciary at all."

New Strategy Rumored.

A report that the Supreme Court retirement bill, favorably reported yesterday by a Senate Judiciary sub-committee, might be used as the means of introducing the President's plan in the Senate, was circulated at the Capitol yesterday, but leaders said they had not heard of such strategy.

Senator Borah, in refusing to approve proposed voluntary retirement of justices at 70, with full pay, said he felt the age should be 75. The Idahoan also objected to a provision under which retired justices could be put to work again in the lower courts. He said the latter proposal was "undignified."

As the House Judiciary Committee adjourned without action on the President's plan, a brief flurry of court debate broke out in the House.

Representative James W. O'Connor, new Democratic member from Montana, replied that the courts have exceeded their Constitutional powers in nullifying legislation.

Senators Speak for, Against Court Change

Text of speech last night by Senator Van Nuys, of Indiana, in opposition to President Roosevelt's Supreme Court reorganization proposals:

With the reforms set out in the proposed bill looking toward more speedy and uniform procedure in cases involving the constitutionality of Federal statutes, I am in hearty accord.

Under the present system, we are confronted by a mass of contradictory decrees and decisions in our District Courts and Circuit Courts of Appeal and litigants are left in confusion and uncertainty under new statutes until the questions are finally passed upon by the Supreme Court. This usually takes many months.

Favors Speedy Justice.

With the objectives of this bill therefore to make the administration of justice more speedy, equal and certain, I am in complete sympathy and have no doubt that legislation along those lines will be enacted.

With the provisions of the bill, however, to reorganize the courts by appointment of additional judges, I cannot go along.

One of the arguments advanced as to the necessity for such judges is the alleged fact that the dockets of the courts are congested. This argument does not apply to the Supreme Court of the United States because the docket of such court is not congested and has not been for a long length of time. All matters brought before that tribunal are disposed of promptly and decisively.

If the dockets of some of the lower courts are in fact congested and the business of such courts justify additional judges, the presentation of the facts by the Department of Justice will, in my opinion, receive a ready response by the members of the Senate Judiciary Committee and the Senate itself.

Strikes at Government.

But, that part of the bill which provides for enlargement of the Supreme Court and some of the lower courts strikes more vitally at the fundamentals of American Government than a question of temporary congestions.

It is openly admitted by many of its proponents that the real purpose of the bill is to change the complexion of the courts.

Let us meet the issue frankly and above board and not seek to camouflage it with a mass of technical reforms with which we are all in sympathy. It is for that reason that I have moved to make separate bills of the two proposals.

I want to admit in my short argument that the Supreme Court may have been ultraconservative in its interpretation of some of the acts of Congress passed during this Administration. With some of these decisions I do not agree. But after having thumbed the law books for nearly 40 years, I long ago ceased to abuse the court or jury which happened to disagree with me.

The very keystone of our governmental structure lies in the tripartite distribution of power between the executive, the legislative and judicial branches of our government. It was intended that the legislative department should be free and independent in its exclusive function of making the laws; that it was the exclusive business of the executive branch to administer them and that the judicial department and the judicial department alone, should construe them.

Early Decision Cited.

It is true that the Constitution itself does not expressly grant to the Supreme Court the right to invalidate Federal statutes upon the ground that they are unconstitutional. But for 134 years—ever since the decision of Chief Justice Marshall in the case of Marbury vs. Madison—that power has never been seriously questioned by the American people. It cannot be, if we are to maintain the well-balanced governmental structure handed down to us by the forefathers.

Marshall said in that memorable decision: "The powers of the legislature are defined and limited; and that those limits may not be mistaken, or forgotten, the Constitution is written. To what purpose are powers limited, and to what purpose is that limitation committed in writing, if these limits may, at any time be passed by those intended to be restrained? The Constitution is either a superior paramount law, unchangeable by ordinary means, or it is on a level with ordinary legislative acts, and, like other acts, is alterable when the legislature shall please to alter it."

I believe every thinking American citizen will agree with the force of that argument. No thinking citizen would countenance the placing of the Constitution on a parity with ordinary legislative acts which are altered, amended or repealed at the pleasure of the Congress.

Yet I see no difference between that procedure and the changing of the personnel of the Supreme Court in order to obtain a judiciary which will see eye to eye with the whims and viewpoints of an ever-changing Congress.

Washington's Address.

In a few days we shall all reread or listen with reverence to the farewel words of the immortal Washington. May we ponder his admonition, in which he said: "If, in the opinion of the people, the distribution or modification of the constitutional power be in any particular wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way the Constitution designates, but let there be no change by usurpation."

To that doctrine I thoroughly subscribe.

We, as a Nation, have gone through harrying and terrifying experiences in our social, industrial and economic life during the past few years. The whole world has. So far, our old time-tried and fire-tested constitutional government has stood the test, and we are well on our way toward complete recovery, thanks to the vision and courage of this Administration.

If new evils are anticipated in the future, if our sad experiences have demonstrated that the checks and balances of our present form of government need readjustment, let the people say so, but let it not be attempted by Congress through tampering with the courts or tinkering with the Constitution.

"Rights Reserved."

I commend serious consideration of this vital issue by those classes of our citizenship whose rights and privileges in the past have been protected and safeguarded by our highest tribunal. The rights of free speech, free religion and a free press have been preserved to us through all hazards. The Supreme Court has been the pivotal point upon which the rights and liberties of the people, the States and the Federal Government itself have turned.

As has been well said: "Admit that the Federal judiciary may in its time have been guilty of errors; that it has occasionally sought to wield more power than was safe; that it is as fallible as every other human institution. Yet it has been and is a vast agency for good; it has averted many a storm which threatened our peace and has lent its powerful aid in uniting us together in the bonds of law and justice. Its very existence has proved a beacon of safety."

It may be that modern economic and industrial developments demand an enlargement of Federal legislative power. I am not discussing that question tonight. But if so, let it not be accomplished through subterfuge or indirection. Let it be done in the regular, constitutional, American way—by the people themselves—just as it always has been done and, I pray God, always will be done.

McAdoo, of California, Insists Changes Are Essential to End Delays; Refers to Injustices Caused by Postponements.

Excerpts from the speech of Senator McAdoo, of California, indorsing President Roosevelt's judiciary reorganization proposals:

The first question I wish to discuss is the proposed increase of members of the Supreme Court. Who has the power to increase the number of justices? The President has no such authority. Congress alone has the power, but it is the duty of the President, expressly provided in the Constitution itself, to "recommend to the consideration of Congress such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient." From this, it can be seen that, in proposing an increase in the number of justices of the Supreme Court, he has simply performed his constitutional duty; and it can also be seen that it is a question of policy, of which Congress is the sole judge, as to whether or not the President's recommendations shall be adopted.

I have already stated that the Congress has established 10 circuit courts of appeal and 85 district courts of the United States. We have 44 judges of the circuit courts of appeal and 157 judges of the United States district courts, making 201 judges of what we call "the inferor Federal courts." Over these courts, the Congress has complete jurisdiction.

One thing Congress cannot do is to fix the tenure or term of the judges, because the Constitution itself provides that all judges of the United States courts "shall hold their offices during good behavior."

Hold Offices for Life.

This means in actual practice, that judges hold their offices for life. They are the only Federal officers in the United States who have a life tenure.

I claim that a high duty is imposed upon the Congress by the Constitution to provide a sufficient number of judges to enable litigants in the United States courts to get prompt justice. It cannot be contended successfully that we have an adequate judicial system now. It should be our chief concern to secure to the people, who are forced to go into the courts for the protection of their rights, the benefits of a judicial system which will assure expeditious decision of their cases and at the lowest possible expense to them.

Every officer and employe of the United States Government, with the exception of the life-holding judges, is subject to recall by the people in elections held at stated intervals, or to removal through the Executive power of removal. But the judge cannot be reached except throguh impeachment proceedings.

We do not establish courts to give offices for life to judges, nor do we establish them for the benefit of lawyers. We establish courts to secure justice for the people, and it is the people who must be considered first in any scheme of organization or in any measures which may be adopted within the limits of the constitution to provide them with the means of securing justice.

Injustice Through Delay.

In every instance, the wrongs and injustices occasioned by the laws delays are unjustifiable, if not irreparable. It is the high duty of the Congress to provide an adequate judicial organization to prevent these wrongs. There is no truer statement than that "Justice delayed is justice denied."

Under the President's plan, none of the justices of the Supreme Court will retire except upon his own volition. The six additional justices, whom the President will appoint, will result in an increase in the court from nine to 15 members. Is this an unreasonable or unjustified increase?

If it were not for the fact that political questions are inseparably involved in the legislation enacted and to be enacted by the Congress in carrying out the policies of the Administration, no one, upon the merits of the case, could successfully contend that such a reasonable increase in the number of judges of the highest court is not justified by present conditions and inevitable future necessities. But because of the so-called "New Deal" legislation, the constitutionality of some of which the Supreme Court may be called upon to pass, it is contended that the President is trying to "pack" the court for the purpose of securing decisions favorable to his views or to his economic and political philosophy.

I dismiss this suggestion as unworthy of consideration because it impugns the honor and integrity of the Chief Executive of the United States.

In all our history, it cannot be shown that any member or members of the Supreme Court, have been controlled by any President. To the honor of that great tribunal, it can be truthfully said that, throughout the century and a half of its existence, not one man has disgraced the judicial ermine.

"Where do we get the idea that nine is the sacred number and that the Supreme Court must forever be composed of only nine members? The Congress of 1869 was torn by seething passions and hatreds engendered by four years of bloody, internicine strife. It was this Congress which fixed the membership of the Supreme Court at nine. In 1869 the entire population of the United States was approximately 38,500,000. Has anyone the audacity to claim that the Congress of 1869 possessed such prescient and infallible judgment that it could fix at the right figure for all time the membership of the Supreme Court of the United States?

No one will contend for any such nonsense. Even in 1869, it was suggested in the debates in the Congress that the Supreme Court should consist of 15 members in order to take care of the business of the country.

In 1937, the population of the United States is approximately 128,000,000, or three and one-quarter times the population in 1869.

Quorum Rule Expected.

If the Supreme Court should be increased to 15 members, I assume that the Congress would provide that two-thirds of the Court should constitute a quorum for the transaction of general business and that the entire court should, upon the request of any one member, sit in cases of great importance or where constitutional questions are involved.

The President proposes the appointment of 50 judges at large, to be assigned to duty in the congested District Courts of the United States. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court would be empowered to send these judges into those Districts where the need for assistance was most required. The proposed increase in the number of judges for these courts is vital to the proper administration of justice.

In one of the District Courts, the dockets shows that there were 1,593 pending private civil cases on January 31, 1937. Of these, more than one-third of the entire number were six years old and about 15 per cent were ten years old.

I concede that this is the worst example of congestion in the country. It may be said generally that out of 85 judicial districts, 34 are suffering from congestion. The important point is that 70 per cent of all civil litigation is pending in these 34 districts. Therefore, approxiamtely 70 per cent of all civil litigation in the United States district courts is enmeshed in the law's delays.

The subject with which we are dealing is of profound importance. We should approach it dispassionately and with an earnest desire to assist in promoting a more efficient and satisfactory administration of justice in our Federal courts. I believe that what the President proposes will produce that result.

I am sure that Franklin Delano Roosevelt is not, by nature, character or purpose, susceptible to dictatorial rabies. He is an able, conscientious, and high-minded Executive, with a lofty vision of the future of his country and with an eager desire to secure its realization. He can be trusted to use the great powers of his office for the advancement of democracy and for the welfare of the people of the United States.

Spies Followed Labor Leaders, Senate Reveals

By the Associated Press.

Senate investigators produced ledger sheets yesterday which they said showed that General Motors had ordered the Pinkerton Detective Agency to "shadow" William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and other high labor officials.

Chairman La Follette (Progressive), Michigan, of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, said those under Pinkerton surveillance at various times in 1935 included, in addition to Green:

Ray Kelsey Included.

F. C. Piper, president of the Automobile Workers Union of Atlanta, Ga.

W. Luther, organizer for the United Automobile Workers.

Pinkerton officials testified the labor officials had been trailed when they visited cities in which General Motors plans are situated. Their visits were in connection with organizing activities or to fill speaking engagements.

Earlier yesterday, officials of General Motors told the committee files of the company had been "stripped" of labor espionage records after the Senate voted last June to conduct the civil liberties investigation.

Data Thrown Away.

Harry W. Anderson, General Motors labor relations director, testified he removed information from the files of William S. Knudsen, General Motors executive vice president, and of C. E. Wilson, Knudsen's assistant, and "threw it in the waste basket."

Louis Seaton, assistant to Anderson, testified he was in the habit of stripping his files daily, but had surveyed them in August, before a committee subepna was served on the company, and had "found a lot of stuff cluttering them up."

One entry in records introduced today disclosed the Pinkerton's had been instructed to investigate activities of the Corporations Auxiliary Co., a competing detective agency, in conection with a "product" leak.

Seaton said he had had a "feeling some engineering information" was getting out to competitors.

Mass., N. H. Join Court Plan Foes

Boston, Feb. 16 (AP).—Houses of Representatives in two more New England States, Massachusetts and New Hampshire, called on Congress today, in resolutions, to reject President Roosevelt's proposal to increase the personnel of the Supreme Court.

In both States, voting was strictly on party lines, the Republican majorities beating down strong Democratic opposition to the resolutions.

The vote in Massachusetts was 124 to 92 and in New Hampshire, 215 to 147. Both States gave their electoral votes to Roosevelt in the recent Presidential election.

Under the President's plan a new Supreme Court justice would be appointed for each present justice of more than 70 years of age, who did not retire, with a maximum of six new members.

President's Attack on Court Minimized as Lure to Visitors

The large, white building at No. 1 First street northeast is enjoying a banner month as a host to visitors, but conservative Capt. P. H. Crook doesn't think the increased attendance is due to the White House bombshell.

No. 1 First street northeast is the seat of the Supreme Court, and Capt. Crook is the captain of the guard.

Upon solicitation, he will offer a mass of statistics to you, indicating that the current month may produce a new February record for sightseers, only to follow up with the cold-water observation that the President's sally against the tribunal has nothing to do with the spurt.

With the court in recess for the remainder of this month, 18,036 persons visited the building between February 1 and 15, compared to 21,489 for all 29 days of February, 1936.

Courtroom spectators during the first 15 days of this month, which included three Mondays (decision days), numbered 11,675, compared to 9,550 for the corresponding period last year.

All of which would indicate that the White House blast of February 5, calling for drastic reform of the Federal judiciary, gave the guards who "clock" the incomers a lot more work to do.

"Just keep on looking at the record," cautioned the precise Capt. Crook.

So it was discovered that 363 fewer visitors were seated in the court chamber on February 8, the first decision day after the President's proposal, than on February 1. Also that a mere 641 presented themselves on Monday of this week, the next to smallest decision-day attendance of the year.

"The number of visitors begins to increase at this time of year," said Capt. Crook, "reaching a climax along in April. It seems to me that the present controversy has not affected the figures one way or another. And the folks who are coming in are no more inquisitive about the court and its members than those who came through before February 5."

D. A. R. Urges Women to Give Views on Court

Statement Cites Traditional Freedom From Politics of High Bench.

It is premature to assume that President Roosevelt would abuse the power to increase the Supreme Court from 9 to 15 members, so that his appointees would be counted upon to declare such measures constitutional as he may propose, the Daughters of the American Revolution asserted in a statement issued yesterday.

"The point is clear, however, that no such temptation should be placed before an executive whether present, or future, that could have the effect of going contrary to the system so definitely outlined in the Constitution and acceptable thus far to the majority of the American people."

Issued by President.

The statement was issued by Mrs. William A. Becker, the president general, through the patriotic education committee, of which Mrs. Vinton Earl Sisson is chairman.

"The proposed Supreme Court change now before Congress is, indeed, the most important issue of the day, and as such cannot be ignored by patriotic citizens," the statement asserted.

"We must consider the immediate effect of such a change, the place of the Supreme Court in the American system of government for 150 years, and the potential danger that might arise in the future from the establishment of such a precedent."

"Free From Politics."

In continuing, the statement said:

"The traditions regarding our Supreme Court must be lightly disregarded. The judiciary branch of the Federal Government has ever been above suspicion and been entirely free from political entanglements."

The statement pointed out that "a Supreme Court of 15 members would undoubtedly prove unweildy. Many authorities believe that nine members are too many, and they contend that a smaller court would be able to serve the people better because the deliberations would be less cumbersome."

In sounding a call to members of the organization everywhere to communicate their views to the President, the statement concluded:

"If you believe that the proposed increase in the present Supreme Court personnel unwise, even dangerous in its portent, will you not make your views known to the President in accordance with his expressed desire to know how the people feel about the matter?"

Such communications, it was urged, should be wired or written to Representative Hatton W. Sumners, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee; Senator Henry F. Ashurst, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, or Representatives and Senators representing territories from which the communications come.

Rail Officials Clear Engineer In Train Wreck

Coroner's Jury is Called to Investigate Accident Near Laurel.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Feb. 16.—As workmen cleared the wreckage from the scene of the grade crossing accident at Dorsey in which two men died, C. W. Galloway, vice president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co., cleared Elmer C. Pope, the dead engineer, of blame.

Galloway said he was "particularly distressed over the death of Engineer Pope whom I have known for a number of years." He added that Pope "was a good engineer and in no way responsible for the disaster."

Pope, who lived in Frederick, and Sol Eli, 28, of Ridgeville, truck driver, died in the collision of the passenger train and the truck late yesterday. The engine plunged down an embankment into Deep Run Branch. Wreckage littered the right of way for hundreds of feet.

Inquest Is Scheduled.

Magistrate Harry D. Kirkwood, of Farndale, scheduled an inquest into the deaths of the two men for next Wednesday night. State police said the accident occurred in Anne Arundel County, instead of Howard County as first believed.

None of the 50 passengers on the train was hurt. The four cars, including three coaches, were derailed but did not overturn. The big truck, owned by a Baltimore transfer company, was demolished.

"Whoever is responsible for this accident," Galloway said, "the management of the Baltimore & Ohio is definitely positive that it is not Engineer Pope."

Challenge to Drivers.

Galloway asserted that the accident "is a definite opportunity to challenge the incompetency of many drivers and their disregard of signals installed for their safety."

He added that the warning bell was ringing, the flash light signal was working and "I understand there were people living in the vicinity who heard the engineer sounding the locomotive whistle for the crossing."

A. T. Myers, of Odenton, who witnessed the crash, said he saw all the signals working but added: "Apparently the man in the truck never saw the train at all."

Katharine Cornell Is 39.

Prison Terms Slashed as Italy Honors Prince

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Feb. 16.—Even men who sought to assassinate Premier Benito Mussolini enjoyed the benefits tonight of an amnesty act in celebration of the birth of a prospective heir to the Italian throne.

Although the law refused clemency to prisoners whose crimes Italy believes never can be tolerated—or forgiven—abortionists, narcotics dealers, spies and profiteers—it gave shortened sentences to a group of one-time leaders who turned against the regime and its Duce.

Best known of these, probably, is Cesare Rossi, an early collaborator with Il Duce in Fascism, once a member of the Fascist grand council and once head of the Italian Press Bureau.

A decade ago Rossi was lured across the Italian border from his exile in France, arrested and sentenced to 30 years in prison for alleged anti-government activities.

The new law, celebrating the birth Friday of Vittorio Emanuele, Prince of Naples and prospective king after his father, Crown Prince Umberto, would take four years off Rossi's term.

Other beneficiaries were said to be Gen. Luigi Capello and Gen. Tito Zaniboni, one of Italy's most honored World War heroes and a former Socialist deputy.

Both plotted to kill Il Duce. Caught on the day they were to have shot at him, they were tried, convicted and sentenced to 30-year terms.

In the same category was Gino Lucetti, who threw a bomb at the Premier's automobile September 11, 1936, at also was sent to prison for 30 years.

Promulgation of the amnesty law specifically exempted from its favors a group of prisoners known as "confinati di polizia," or political offenders nominally in police custody. These prisoners have been confined in prison without the formality of public trial.

There was no official estimate of the total granted amnesty but informed sources said it would be in the "thousands."

Middle-Aged Plan To Wage Fight on Employment Bans.

Delegates of militant middle-age who believe that life doesn't end at 35 met at the Hotel Willard yesterday to fight, with "a national campaign of education," an alleged employer-discrimination against men and women 35 years old and over.

The meeting produced two resolutions and a speech by Edward C. Rybicki, president of the New York Council on Economics—the organization which called the meeting—and former director of New York City's free employment agency.

The first resolution asked Americans to join the campaign against scrapping middle-aged workers. The second asked Federal, State and city civil service commissions to remove age-barriers against workers, except in cases where "youth is essential."

Rybicki said that industrial scrapping of persons over 35 was responsible for more than 60 per cent of our work relief load, tended toward permanent unemployment, was destroying the morale of men and women above the 35-year age and was "creating a resentment against the employers practicing this un-American policy of employment.' This, he declared, was a "regrettable situation."

Nazis Launch Drive to Gain Control of Protestant Church

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 16.—Nazi Germany set out tonight to win a Protestant Church control election for Adolf Hitler.

The controlled press urged all Protestants to subordinate their private confessional opinions and interests to "the greater internal unity of the German nation."

It told "dogmatic theologians" to keep out of the contest.

To German fundamentalists, banded together in the oppositional confessional synod, the editorials signalized the Nazis' determination to capture the election which Der Fuehrer has decreed for deciding the control of the Evangelical Church.

Thereafter, these oppositionists charged, the Nazi idea would be to make every German Protestant conform to Nazi theological concepts.

High interest centered on an expected decree from Church Minister Hans Kerrl as to how the election will be conducted.

No date has been set for the balloting, which Hitler ordered conducted among the evangelical electorate to choose a general synod for the direction of church affairs.

The Hitler decree came after his Reich church committee, unable to fulfill its intended function of achieving Protestant Church unity in Germany, resigned in a body.

Some observers said that if everyone who pays the evangelical church tax is permitted to vote, the Nazis will have little difficulty winning the election.

Labor Board's Shipbuilding Plea Is Denied

Court Refuses to Force Firm Into Hearing on Charge of Unfair Acts.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Feb. 16.—The National Labor Relations Board's attempt to force the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation into a hearing to answer charges of unfair labor practices today met another defeat, this time at the hands of the United States Circuit Court.

Ruling that it was "altogether probable" the corporation was outside the board's jurisdiction, the court rejected the board's appeal from an injunction preventing it from summoning representatives of the company to a hearing.

The Labor Board has charged the shipbuilding firm with "dominating and interfering with a labor organization formed by the employes" and with "preventing the employes from securing the benefits of collective bargaining."

Specifically, in an opinion written by Federal Judge James M. Morton, jr., the court ruled:

"Both the shipbuilding company and its employes have a right that the established friendly relations between them shall not be injured without legal justification.

"It cannot be said that the district judge erred in finding and ruling that the plaintiffs had no adequate remedy at law or in finding and holding that danger of irreparable injury was shown and that considering the doubt as to the board's jurisdiction, the plaintiffs were entitled to repliminary injunctions."

Japanese Diet, Military Heads Renew Dispute

Political Parties' Attitude Toward Army Stirs Fresh Crisis.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Wednesday), Feb. 17.—An unexpected new crisis involving the dispute between the army and lower house of the Diet arose today to plague legislators trying to settle Japan's political difficulties.

This development followed lengthy antiarmy interpellations by leaders of the Seiyukai and Minseito parties.

Immediately after Tuesday's session of the Parliament War Minister Lieut. Gen. Gen Sugiyama and Vice War Minister Lieut. Gen. Yashikiro Umezu exchanged views with reference to the political parties' attitude.

An elderly peer's dramatic attack in the House on "medieval" police torture methods and Navy Minister Mitsumasa Yonai's declaration that Japan will not try to equal the world's great fleets had given the Diet a changing oratorical tempo. The House of Peers heard in silence a description of torture by Kishichi Kokubo, 72-year-old member of that body.

Kokubo's allegations included instances in which he said police hung victims by their heels, poured water in their nostrils, burned their foreheads.

He described torture he underwent years ago for an alleged political offense, and demanded that the new government of Senjuro Hayashi forbid such practices. He was assured the torture methods had been abolished.

Va. Industrial Outlook Good, Speaker Says

Industry Can Grow 50% With Present Labor, Culpeper Told.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., Feb. 16.—Virginia can expand her industrial activities approximately 50 per cent in the next five years, without importing labor to meet added employment opportunities, Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the State commission on conservation and development, declared tonight in an address before the Culpeper Chamber of Commerce. He pointed to the trend toward decentralization in large industry, and said the time was ripe for Virginia to seek some of these decentralized units.

He said industries most desirable for Virginia are the chemical, both light and heavy; machinery and allied products, and foods, and advised against certain types of undesirable industries.

Speaking on the resources of the State, Hall described the functions of each of the six divisions of the commission, and told how some of these divisions, principally forestry, the geological survey, and water resources and power, were aiding industries to locate in the State.

"Every indication in our present-day business and economical life points to a decentralization of many of the large industries, whose operation are now centralized in the North and East," Hall said.

"Tough as nails was Big Chief Indian, and the stuff he drank was lightning."

No leather-throated redskin, modern man prefers a milder whiskey . . . one that possesses all these 3 VIRTUES:

1 The new good taste of IRISH AMERICAN

2 The greater mildness of IRISH AMERICAN

3 The easier digestibility of IRISH AMERICAN

The iron-clad expression of the Big Chief's countenance is symbolic of the iron-clad interior that could handle liquid fire without a quiver.

BIG CHIEF INDIAN liked his firewater—and he liked it raw, rough and potent. Anything would do, so long as it had a kick like a mule. For the chief could take it—he wasn't fussy.

But modern man isn't as tough. He doesn't judge a beverage by its kinship with chain lightning, but prefers a truly mild whiskey. In fact, he wants one that is definitely easy on his system as well as pleasing to his palate . . . and that is just why more and more men are turning to IRISH AMERICAN.

IRISH AMERICAN is utterly unlike any whiskey you have ever tried. It tastes different—acts different—IS different because it is made different! Rich, round, robust pot still whiskey is imported and painstakingly united with specially distilled American whiskey. The result is a superior whiskey that can truthfully boast of a new good taste, greater mildness and easier digestibility.

Discriminating drinkers everywhere are showing marked preference for this whiskey. They appreciate its distinctive flavor whether taken straight, in highballs or mixed. Men who formerly drank only expensive whiskies acclaim IRISH AMERICAN as a real taste treat.

IRISH AMERICAN was especially developed for modern tastes, especially created for modern living. It is priced so that the average man can enjoy a really fine whiskey of better quality. Ask for it by its full name—William Jameson IRISH AMERICAN.

D.C. Night Club Offers Novelty In Floor Shows

Stream Line Scandals Is New Production With Unusual Effects.

We've had floor shows at our night spots under every other conceivable name—so it is with no surprise whatever that the current attraction at Cocoanut Grove is named Stream Line Scandals. Whatever may have been the idea in mind when the producers tagged it so, the title evidently refers to the figures of the young ladies of the ensemble.

Spies who report on such matters report that the ladies of the chorus might well have been the inspiration, anyway. The costumes are of phosphorescent stuff—an effect created by Strobilite of New York, specialist in luminous stage costumes. Its all another one of those Chester production—featuring the team of Lester and Daniels.

Most of us take our after-darking with an enormous dose of nonchalence. But did you ever wonder how much work goes into producing a show properly? Let's take the Russian Troika for an example. Hours went into the production. And then a goodly crowd of gentlemen fresh from a banquet dropped in and stopped the show. That is, there was so much noise by the gentlemen that the performers stopped on occasions until the racket subsided. Marusia Sava quieted the crowd once with a psychologically correct "Thank you" in soft sweet tones. But the fellow who interrupted the dagger dance really brought things under control. A dagger dance is nothing to toy with.

The strolling team of Evans and Dianne, augmenting the Campell-Lissue style of entertainment, is holding forth at the Mayfair. Dianne is a Charlotte, N. C., girl, who is making good for the home town. Confidentially, she should be grabbed up by Jack Benny to play "The Bee" on his program. She's studied music all her life, graduate of two outstanding schools of music and played violin for two years in a symphony. Heigh, ho! Now its swing.

La Paree is presenting "Broadway on Parade" this week, bringing the customers the Gorgeous Blond Deceiver—a magician who proves that the feminine hand also can be quicker than the eye. Also present are the Lorraines, popular Bolero dance team. Dolores is nicknamed "the breath of old Spain." There'll be another Sunday night series of from WJSV.

Little Sam Robbins is having broadcasts, beginning this week, things his own way at the Raleigh's Pall Mall room. Sammy is a showman and that means he turns his men into entertainers—the kind who stop the dancers and bring them up to the stand when the specialties begin. It is now rumored that Sam's friends in Baltimore are planning a big reception for him soon—a sort of homecoming. Halliday and Clark present their "swing moderne" dances this week. Something different.

Judy Lawton spends all her time off the floor at the Carlton's El Patio, sightseeing. And she likes the White House best. Once she sang for the President aboard Vincent Astor's yacht in Nassau and that makes for distinct partiality, as she puts it.

"Dancing Sweethearts, Arthur Warren's new composition as introduced at the valentine tea at Wardman Park last Saturday, won the instant approval of the cash customers. The lyrics are dedicated to college girls and boys who have found Maestro Warren's music so much to their liking. The tune will be featured throughout the week in the metronome room.

For Lent, at the Shoreham: Broiled lobster with drawn butter sauce and filet of sole marguery. Prepared by Jacques, the French chef, and served with chef's salad. The De Mayos, voted by Ripley the world's fastest whirlwind dancers, are numbered among the talent on the supper club floor.

At the Lotus: Starred among the Paul Florenz numbers are those of the George Andre trio, an adagio and a rhythm waltz; the novelty offering of Moresco and Hayden; personalty songs, by Evelyn Knight, and th ensemble, whose modernistic costumes are the talk of the ringsiders. Bill Strickland and his orchestra for dancing, luncheon dinner and supper.

Lorraines of La Paree

Featuring the current floor bill at La Paree are the Lorraines. The Bolero is their specialty. Also featured is the Gorgeous Blonde Deceiver, who proves the feminine hand is quite as much faster than the eye as that of a gentleman magician.

back home, and we don't intend they shall be disappointed."

Asked if the league would undertake in the 1938 elections to defeat those members of Congress who oppose the reform, Berry said:

"Well, we will not look kindly on those who disregard the importance of this proposal."

Liberals Invited.

Many liberals will be invited to the convention here, in addition to personnel of State and district chairmen, the national committee of about 75, and heads of the affiliated unions. About 500 are expected to attend the sessions.

Berry said the proposed campaign was in line with objectives of the league at the time it was organized in April, 1936. He gave those objectives as (1) to help re-elect President Roosevelt, (2) to support him in efforts to obtain "liberal" legislation in his second term, and (3) to be prepared to take advantage in 1940 of any possible new political alignments.

When a reporter said Lewis and others in the league had committed themselves to a constitutional amendment to permit the Administration to obtain legislation now outlawed by the Supreme Court, Berry replied that he had always taken the stand that "we should use all the possible present means" before resorting to an amendment.

Silent About Green.

Meanwhile, Lewis, who also is president of the United Mine Workers, refused to comment on the vote of the union's policy committee on Monday for expulsion from the union of William Green, president of the Federation. The expulsion was voted as a result of Green's terming the result of the recent automobile strike, directed by Lewis, "a surrender" to General Motors Corporation.

Green, however, said last night that he was confident that even if the expulsion is effected he will be able to continue as president of the federation. He said also he expected the federation council to take a stand this week on the expulsion move, and also take a stand on the "sit-down" strike, used by Lewis' automobile union, as a policy.

Humorous Debate Will Decide Merit Of College Faculty

Whether the faculty at the University of Maryland should be abolished will be decided in a debate at College Park, Md., tonight—but it will only be in fun.

Two members of the Calvert Debate Club, John Jacob and Dan Prettyman, both of Baltimore, will attempt to convince a mixed student-faculty audience of the soundness of their arguments in favor of a university minus a faculty.

The faculty's side will be presented by two other members of the debate club—Mildred Hearn, 1426 M street northwest, and Jerry Schuh, 406 Rosemary street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Slayers' Escape Plans Disclosed

Brookville, Ind., Feb. 16 (AP).—Capt. Matt Leach, of Indiana State police disclosed late today that William A. Kuhlman and John J. Poholsky, confessed participants in the "head and hand" slaying of Harry R. Miller, retired Cincinnati fire captain, had plotted to escape from their cell by torturing the wife of Sheriff John C. Moore.

Capt. Leach said the two men planned to grab Mrs. Moore as she brought them their food, to slash her wrists and torture her. They then planned to use her as a hostage to make their get-away when the Sheriff arrived.

Williamsport, Pa., Feb. 16 (U.P.).—F. F. Healey dealt himself 13 spades in a bridge game today. There was no play in the game after bids of one club, a diamond, a heart raise from his partner and a pass leading up to seven spades.

trail from the southwestern tip of the State to Chesapeake Bay. An eight-inch fall was recorded in Shennadoah National Park, while the snowfall turned to a rapidly melting slush when it pelted the streets in Richmond and much of eastern Virginia. At Norfolk, however, snow flurries whirled icily, and the mercury was a single degree above freezing.

Mrs. Eslin died in Emergency Hospital less than half an hour after she walked in front of a street car at Twelfth and F streets northwest.

Witnesses told police she stepped from a loading platform across the tracks, apparently blinded by the snow, into the path of the car, which was operated by Joseph H. Higgs, 59, of 747 Tenth street southeast.

Her death brought the 1937 toll in Washington to 22, 6 more than there were at the same time last year.

A crash between a large truck and a street car at Ninth and Kennedy streets northwest, sent two men to the hospital yesterday.

The truck driver, Clyde A. Bowles, 20, of 4898 Conduit road northwest, and a passenger, Alton B. Cissell, 32, of 1613 H street southeast, were taken to Walter Reed Hospital for cuts and bruises. Cissell may have several fractured ribs, doctors said.

David Kaswick, 50, Gospel Mission, was admitted to Casualty Hospital suffering concussion of the brain and multiple lacerations when he was knocked down by a bus at Fifth and G street northwest. The bus was operated by Lemuel G. Gillikin, 25, 1105 K street northwest, police said.

A storm reported between Florida and South Carolina had blown down several of its lines, the Western Union reported in New York.

The bureau stated that while the system was experiencing no interruption in service, a number of lines apparently had gone down in the vicinities of Charleston and Columbia, S. C.; Savannah, Ga., and Jacksonville, Fla.

On the Air Today

Two events today raise the broadcast menu a bit above the average. First, George Rector, restaurateur and food authority of almost four decades, has been appointed master chief of the "Delicious Kitchen," making its debut for Columbia today. It will be heard from WJSV, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays at 1:30.

Rector will reminisce about the old days at Rector's when world-famous personages dined there. And he'll give many of the recipes that made the name of Rector an emblem of cuisine excellence.

According to Rector, Diamond Jim Brady was the best customer he ever had. He'll tell about him today. Marcella Shields will learn how to make pork chops Florentine in this first program.

Second on the program today is the fifth radio anniversary of Burns and Allen. Probably with fitting sacrificial rites and beating of tomtoms. George and Gracie have been on the air continuously for these five years, never missing a week's broadcast.

Gracie, in a copyrighted story given the Broadcasting Bugle while riding on a tricycle built for two, said they had been beautiful years and bring back a score of beautiful memories. "How can I ever forget my first experience before the microphone?" lisped Gracie. "It was as a guest on the Eddie Cantor program and I can assure you it was the making of Eddie. Look at him today—he's been co-starring with a flea!"

• • • •

Perhaps you will be interested in knowing that Gracie was born in San Francisco and George in New York. Gracie is convent reared, George headed for the stage at an early age. The two met backstage in a theater at Union Hill, N. J. After four years of vaudeville they were married. They made their broadcasting debut while on a European jaunt, appearing 15 weeks for the British Broadcasting Corporation. Cantor really was the cause of it all on this side. He induced Gracie to appear on his program in a five-minute spot.

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Feb. 16.

ONE of the most interesting of recent events was the absorption of the grand old Delineator by Pictorial Review. The merger narrows the field by one, and is probably a good thing for the trade.

ALICE HUGHES.

I learned, from this journalistic event, that countless thousands of women still sew—a fact that business girls are too apt to forget. The famous pattern department of Delineator has been kept intact, and the three clever girls who run it—Jerry Maxwell, Ruth Seder and Gertrude Warburton—go right on in command of it.

The mainspring of Delineator's editorial department for the past couple of years has been Marie Sermolino, a vivid, talented girl who was a member of the famous class of 1917 at the Columbia School of Journalism. Marie will continue to function under the new dispensation—and any magazine is fortunate to have her on its staff.

A grand old magazine, Delineator. I learn that the name will not perish, but will appear on the cover of Pictorial, which is a good thing. I don't suppose there is a woman in this country whose girlhood did not contain monthly copies of the Delineator, either in her home or in those of her playmates!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The most thrilling new thing on the local stage is the performance of the Enuglishman, Maurice Evens, in "King Richard II," a play by a Mr. Shakespeare. This Evans has been appearing locally for the past two years in plays that had little success, and few people, comparatively, have realized what a brilliant mime he is. Now they know. His Richard is a magnificent creation, and should be on your "must list" if you come to town in the next few weeks.

I suddenly realize that this is the month the new seed catalogues arrive, and while the February winds howl we can plot and plan our gardens for the coming year. Though where on earth I would find a place to sow a zinnia seed I haven't the faintest notion. Sometimes months go by without my seeing so much as a potful of real soil. What a ghastly sort of fate! . . .

• • • •

And just to make life even more cruel, I was led by the hand to inspect a surrealist dining room designed by the well-known di Chirico. No doubt it is very nice and very interesting—but I wouldn't be answerable for my family's collective digestions after a few months of meals in it.

The bustling city of Dallas is steaming up its fair again, to open June 12 and run through October. Stanley Marcus, one of the town's leading merchants, tells me they expect about 7,000,000 visitors this year. And speaking of fairs, we seem to be doing all right with the exhibition we propose to have in 1939. The boys have already sold about $20,000,000 worth of its bonds, and the Flushing swamps, where it will be held, are almost dried out already . . .

The music-lovers are now rushing around in circles because the Metropolitan Opera is beginning its annual production of Wagner's "Ring des Nibelungen." And they are quite justified, for the Wagnerian performances this season are undoubtedly the finest ever presented in this country. The name of Flagstad has become both artistic and boxoffice magic.

I went to the Boston Terrier Show just held at the Hotel Pennsylvania, for that is a type of pooch I favor strongly. The best-in-show award went to a cute thing named Elyria Easter Parade—who had his picture taken in the huge trophy cup he won! . . .

Pink keeps popping up in the style picture for spring. Sara Pennoyer, broadcasting from Paris, called it "watermelon pink," while Rochas dubs it "strawberry." Whatever the tag, it is a deep, rich color—and not the faintly blushing pink which has a somewhat sissy connotation. Pink or beinge, ladies!

New Complexions for Spring Colors

By Ethel Ehlen,

The Post Fashion Editor.

"WHEN planning your spring wardrobe, at the same time consider your complexion, or the picture may be incongruous rather than chic," says Mme. Elizabeth Colbo, noted beautician who is in Washington this week. You may be the perfect type for some of the new tones and hues and again they may not be suited to your coloring at all, unless you blend the color of your costume to your complexion, this expert contends. In other words "dress to your make-up" for complete harmony.

"Women should be divided into three classes," explained Mme. Colbo, "those with golden skins, with pinkish skins, and those whose faces seem to be absolutely colorless." For each of these, there are powders, rouge, lipstick and foundation lotions or creams which do things for you. Correctly chosen and skillfully applied, cosmetics can make one glamorous. Make-up used without discrimination not only detracts, but is often hideous. "Every woman can wear every color, but not every shade or tint of every color," Mme. Colbo advised.

"In some skins, the orange or golden tones dominate; these skins may be palest creamy-white, ivory, golden tan or deep sun-brown. But they are all golden rather than blue in undertone. Colors which emphasize the golden coloring of the skin are the flattering choice for such complexions, said Mme. Colbo. Other skins in which blue tones are apparent and the blood seems to show through (the pinkish skins), costume colors should contain blues and reds; the yellow and tawny tones being second choice. The colorless or neutral skins that contain neither blue nor yellow tones require warm shades that cast a reflection on the face. These skins also need vivid red cosmetics to give life and accent."

MAKE-UP FOR GRAY is the most difficult and most important of these three popular types of costumes. Since gray drains all color from the face, make-up of a bright nature is necessary for all skin to give a glow to complexion.

MAKE-UP FOR PRINTS require subtle planning. Select either the background or one of the colors in the pattern, and make up your complexion to harmonize with this chosen tint. Be guided by the class in which your skin tone belongs.

MAKE-UP FOR BEIGE requires powder with a golden cast plus bright rouge and lipstick. The aim is to dramatize golden skin if you possess it, and create the illusion of such a complexion if your skin belongs in other classifications.

Changed Menu Makes Meals More Inviting

Fried Codfish Balls Are One Way to Vary Usual Routine.

By Rebekah Blake.

SLIP OUT of the routine of serving the same foods over and over again. A change is a rest to the family and meals will seem more inviting if unexpected foods are served now and then.

Have you served codfish balls lately? They now come in cans, as do codfish cakes, and they are both full of flavor and easy to prepare. They are tasty fried and served with tomato sauce. Tomato sauce comes in cans all seasoned, but if you prefer to make your own sauce, you may do so by using canned tomato and thickening it and seasoning it to suit the taste.

These cakes or balls may be served for breakfast, luncheon or dinner, as you desire. Here is a menu suggestion for luncheon including codfish balls.

Codfish Balls.
Picalilli
Whole wheat muffins Butter
Fruit salad
Date and marshmallow dressing
Little peanut cakes
Hot tea

Corned beef hash is another food that breaks the monotony of the average meal. It too comes in cans. It is made from fine, well-chosen corned beef, potatoes and seasonings, which means that the housewife is saved from getting many different ingredients together to make it at home, and at the same time is assured of an excellent product. The hash may be served without any preparation other than heating. Or extra onion, green pepper, meat or tomatoes may be added. Some persons like a little crisp bacon added, while others like to arrange it in a shallow baking dish, break eggs on the top and then bake the whole dish in the oven until the eggs are "set." If this is done, it is well to sprinkle extra salt and pepper over the top of each egg. This is an excellent dish to feature for lunch or supper.

Luncheon Menu.
Baked hash with poached eggs
Biscuits Butter
Lettuce with tabasco dressing
Milk
Oranges with maple syrup and whipped cream

Dinner Menu.
Egg and asparagus hors d'oeuvres
Corned beef hash with tomato sauce
Scalloped eggplant
Lima beans
Hot rolls Butter
Coffee Milk
Dutch prune cake
Prune sauce

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I came to Washington last May to take a stenographic position in a Government department. For six months the work was straight dictation and transcription, nothing which required initiative or self-decision. Then I was transferred and promoted to work of a technical kind, where my duties were more varied. The technical nature of the work involved terms so new and strange to me as to seem almost like a foreign language. My boss is a brilliant man who has spent most of his life studying this kind of work, so that he knows it from A to Z. He is not the type of man who bothers to explain things to his stenographer, and I regret to say I do not have the ability to grasp these things quickly for myself. My memory is not all I could wish, although I am trying my best to improve it.

• • • •

A couple of things have come up which provoked my boss, although I do not feel I was entirely to blame. Then, too, he is gone a great deal on conferences and I am left without any work to do. I've asked him so many times just what he wants me to do in his absence and he has no suggestions to make. I've tried to find things to do (such as fixing up the files, etc.), but the work just isn't there. This worries me dreadfully, as I like to be busy all the time. There is no definite daily routine work that I can fall back on, and I feel that my proficiency in shorthand and typing is impaired for lack of practice.

• • • •

My boss isn't the sort of person I can go to and talk over the situation, and yet I know that a spirit of mutual understanding and cooperation must exist between employer and employe if their work is to be successful. We just don't seem to understand each other. I have the feeling that I am just sort of a necessary evil to him. Perhaps this is all my fault, but if so, please tell be how to remedy it. This is a constant source of worry to me, so any advice you may have to offer will be greatly appreciated. Sincerely,

SECRETARY.

The Office Wife.

DEAR SECRETARY: I have referred your problem to two excellent secretaries of my acquaintance, one a man and the other a woman, and both agree your principal handicap is probably lack of training and imagination with regard to your job. Said the woman: "She probably doesn't know all the duties of a secretary. If she did, she would be very much occupied during her boss' absence. Because during the time he was in the office, she would find herself putting aside certain things which could just as well, or better, be done in his absence. Suppose, for instance, she notices while he is there that he or she must constantly look up certain telephone numbers he is in the habit of calling. She can form a habit of jotting down these numbers on a memorandum pad, and in his absence she can arrange them alphabetically and under certain classifications in a loose-leaf note book.

• • • •

"She can keep her ears open and jot down the names of all his out-of-town acquaintances, friends or business associates, anyone he ever communicates with about anything whatsoever, and file these names and addresses alphabetically for future reference. I wonder if she keeps a 'tickler file?' This is very handy for reminding the boss of the birthdays of his friends, certain anniversaries—including his own wedding anniversary—and any other occasion which might embarrass him professionally, socially or personally if overlooked. She can bring this file up-to-date in his absences, and consult it every morning for unobtrusive and helpful reminders.

• • • •

"The dut, of a secretary, in a word," said this very efficient woman, "is to relieve her boss of every possible picayunish detail in the day's routine. It can't be taught. She simply has to have the imagination to see for herself what is to be done and how to do it." This secretary suggests you master the esoteric terminology of your employer's technical work by getting out old correspondence from his files in his absence and making a transcript in shorthand of the more forbidding words and phrases for intensive study; or, better yet, making copies of these letters, omitting names and other identifying data, and using them for home study. She suggests further that as the day's mail arrives, you attach to each letter all foregoing correspondence on the subject and read it carefully yourself in order to familiarize yourself with the case—though you may have to get to work a half hour to an hour earlier to do so—so that you will know just what the boss is talking about when he starts dictation.

• • • •

"What is the best technique for getting along with the boss?" this secretary was asked. "Always keep smiling," she said, with a chuckle. But in her case, I am sure pleasing personal appearance has been a great asset, for she is always meticulously groomed and smartly dressed, and her face is radiant with good humor and good health.

The man secretary's advice was this: "Never ask the boss what he wants you to do while he's gone! In the first place, it suggests that you won't have anything to do and probably aren't worth your salary; and in the second place, it irritates him to be asked to do your thinking for you. It's the secretary's business to think for the boss in matters of office management and routine."

• • • •

Supposing there just isn't enough honest-to-goodness work to keep you busy every hour of every day while the boss is gone, then spend part of the time studying subjects related to his special work, this man advised. He maintains that any boss would be pleased by such a mark of ambitions, intelligent interest in his career. He also suggested that you ask the advice of some efficient secretary who is in a position to observe the routine anairs of your office. "Such a person might have suggestions to offer that she has never even thought of," he remarked.

• • • •

Both secretaries suggested that you take no chances on your memory until it is fool-proof through long accustomedness to your present work, but to make notes on everything—names, addresses, telephone numbers, dates, snatches of seemingly important conversation, and so on.

For my part, I advise you to stop looking for understanding from your boss and concentrate on understanding his moods and his work; and to stop worrying and spend the energy thus wasted in doing a more imaginative and brilliant piece of office housekeeping. For if you will consider the term, "office wife," which contemporary writers have coined to describe the woman secretary, you will realize that this is just about what her position amounts to.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Medical Progress.

The use of surgery to remove the cause of high blood pressure is regarded by a prominent Chicago physician as the suggestion of the greatest potential importance in medical science of the last few years.

The technique is largely the work of Dr. Crile, who has made so many idealistic suggestions to medical science. If blood pressure is dependent on the elastic response of the large arteries, said Dr. Crile, and if this response is controlled by the complex group of sympathetic nerve ganglia which twine ivy-like around the aorta, and if these nerves are stimplated by the adrenal glands to throw the muculai coats of the arterly into spasm, why not remove the ganglia and break the vicious circles?

Delicate Operation.

The operation can be done, but it is a matter of great delicacy. Thus far a number of successes has been reported for the operation, but all in the hands of very skilled surgeons.

"The biologic proof, offered by Crile, of the vital influence of the endocrine glands, notably the adrenals, in raising the blood pressure, is the fact that in the lion, most active of the animal creation with rapid blood circulation, the ratio of the weight of the adrenals to the entire body weight is 1 to 22,000, while in the sluggish crocodile it is only 1 to 280,000."

Experiment Worth Trying.

The theoretical basis of such procedures for the relief of high blood pressure is far from complete. Not only is there spasm, but increased thickness in the walls of the blood vessels when high blood pressure comes and, removing all the spasm-producing nerves will not change the latter. Still, when the possibility of helping one of the gravest and most widespread diseases to which the human body is subject is at stake, any experiment which might have some possibilities is worth trying.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Friends Bid Farewell To the de Laboulayes

French Ambassador and Family Sail Saturday From New York; New Envoy and Mme. Bonnet Arrive Here Today.

Many friends were at the Union Station yesterday morning to bid farewell to the retiring Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye who left at 11 o'clock, accompanied by their two daughters, for New York, where they will sail Saturday on the Ile de France for Europe.

Since the Ile de France has been delayed a day by storms, the newly appointed Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet will land in New York today, instead of yesterday as scheduled, and will come to Washington this evening.

M. and Mme. Bonnet will be accompanied by M. and Mme. Paul Charpentier. The latter will serve as second secretary of embassy, occupying the post formerly held by M. Claude de Boisanger, who left for Paris last August.

Also on the Ile de France is the First Secretary of the Embassy, M. Roger Gaucheron, who is returning to Washington after several months in France.

Mme. de Laboulaye and her daughters all wore corsages of violets as they left, and carried flowers and gifts which had been brought by friends who gathered to say good-bye. The Minister of Rumania came running just as they were boarding the train, and put a large box of flowers in Mme. de to say good-by. The Minister of Sweden, Mr. Bostrom, presented her with pink carnations.

The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Wilbur Carr were among those at the station, as were Miss Harriet Winslow, the Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther; the Ambassador of China, Mr. Sao-ke Alfred Sze, who arrived in haste just before the train pulled out; the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun, Countess Potocka, wife of the Polish Ambassador, and Mme. Her veil was held in place with a simple arrangement of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of Kilarney roses.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Here again, gone again—almost before anyone knew he had dropped into town for a brief visit—John Roosevelt has returned to his studies at Harvard. Yesterday morning bright and early, White House car No. 102 whirred down to the station, purred to a stop and the tall son of the President alighted and strode through the terminal, catching one of the eye-opener trains.

Some years hence, when a certain very young, young lady has reached the age of having her own luggage marked, there will be considerable confusion in the Copeland household, what with all of the bags and trunks initialed either R. S. Copeland, R. S. Copeland, jr., or another R. S. Copeland. Little Ruth Spalding Copeland, who arrived at the home of her parents, the Royal S. Copelands, jr., last Sunday, has the same initials as her dad and her grandparent.

Mrs. Copeland, after attending the Malin Craigs' dinner party last evening, hurried back to her apartment at the Shoreham and thence to the station to board the sleeper for Suffern and her first view of her newest granddaughter.

• • • •

Margarita Montero is coming back! After weeks of fun in her own Cuba, she is returning to join her uncle and aunt, Dr. and Senora de Albertini, at the Shoreham some time next week. From what we hear, there is a certain young man here who wishes the days from now until Margarita's arrival would speed by more quickly. And from something else we have been hearing, we shall not be among those surprised when an announcement is made.

Pretty Elizabeth Sibley had on a stunning black and scarlet outfit the other evening. Her coat was one of those tailored affairs, double breasted, with wide lapels and fitted just right, made of knobby twill, black, of course. At the neck was a scarlet silk scarf tied in cravat fashion. Her tall-crowned hat had as its sole ornament a single red quill.

Hazel Edgar was making the rounds of town yesterday armed, among other things, with a pair of very neat little pliers. No, she was not anticipating trouble with her automobile, nor yet was she expecting to use them as a weapon; rather, her galoshes, the zipper kind, are temperamental and once in a while they simply will not budge.

Art Exhibition For Red Cross To Close Today

Lively Bidding by District Society Swells Flood Relief Fund.

Today marks the closing of the exhibition of paintings by Washington artists, which has been conducted at Garfinckel's under the auspices of the Arts Club for the benefit of the Red Cross flood relief fund.

The silent bidding has been going on steadily since the exhibition opened. Members of Capital society gathered at the gallery on the first day and many of them turned in bids on pictures. When higher bids came on the same paintings, the original bidders, in many instances, raised their first figures. Just before leaving with Mrs. Roosevelt for Ithaca yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, left a second bid on a picture she selected the first day of the exhibition. She and Mrs. Roosevelt attended together at that time.

Miss Edith Hoyt, who originally suggested having the exhibition and who was chairman of arrangements for it, has been ill and unable to be actively in charge. Each day, however, there have been members of the committee there to act as hostesses. Yesterday Mrs. Philip Coffin and Miss Elizabeth Roberts, daughter of Mr. Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, both of whom contributed pictures, were at the gallery, as were Mme. Lombard, wife of the Military Attache of the French Embassy, and Mme. Sherman Miles, who have been assisting daily.

Today is expected to be the most interesting since the exhibition opened, as the successful bidders will call for their pictures. The bidding closed at 5 o'clock yesterday.

Mrs. Gibson Gets Portrait Commission

Capital Society Views Paintings Displayed by Artist.

Five minutes after her exhibit opened yesterday Mrs. James Gibson received a commission to execute another of the delicate portraits such as those she is showing for several days at the Shoreham. The pictures are a cross between water colors and miniatures, done with a technique she developed herself after a year of study in Paris under the Mlles. Faure, celebrated French miniaturists.

Reminiscent of the subdued shades of a Fragonard painting are the colors which Mrs. Gibson uses in her pictures. Against backgrounds of pale blue and green she has drawn the heads of several members of Washington society, including Miss Margot Garrett and Miss Ruth Dove, debutantes of the season. Howes and Baroness van Breugel Douglas, wife of the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation.

The background of these pictures looks very simple, but in reality it takes Mrs. Gibson two days to paint them.

Mrs. Gibson, the former Patience McCormick-Goodhart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton McCormick-Goodhart, was assisted by several of her friends. They included Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, who wore two fresh white carnations at the neck of her black crepe frock; Mrs. Corcoran Thom, jr., and Mrs. Herbert Stratford.

The artist wore a black wool frock with satin sailor collar, striped in several colors, and a gardenia corsage. During the afternoon she welcomed Mme. Lima y Silva, who wore a black caracual coat over her silk frock, and an off-the-face hat to match; Mrs. Mark Bristol, wife of Rear Admiral Bristol, in a black sealskin coat and a hat trimmed with tiny red flowers; Mr. Wolcott Waggaman, the architect, who is building a home for Mr. and Mrs. Gibson near that of the latter's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart; Mrs. Ridley McLean, with her daughter, Mrs. Charles Godwin Moore, and Mrs. Duncan Cameron, with her daughter, Miss Elsie Quinby.

Among others there were Mr. Smith Bowman and Miss Nancy Hanna, members of the hunting set from Fairfax, Va., where Mrs. Gibson rides frequently.

New China Balances Modern Table

A new trend in modern dinnerware is seen in this lily-pad design, the rich pink and green in permanent American Ceramic colors complementing the subdued tones of present-day furniture. Rippled edges on the flat plates balance the straight-line simplicity of modern chairs and tables. In keeping with the design is the pond lily centerpiece.

American-Made Patterns Mark Designs in Modern Dinnerware

6 Vivid Styles on Shape Called Coquette Offered by Slobodkin, Ceramic Artist; Seeks to Add Warmth, Color to Modernistic Rooms.

THE NEW YEAR brings a new conception of modern dinnerware, with the appearance of American-made patterns in more pronounced designs to balance the severity of present-day furniture. Six styles of vivid decorations on a shape known as Coquette have been created by Simon Slobodkin, well-known designer of ceramics, with the idea in mind. Permanent American ceramic colors used in these decorations have permitted rich, warm effects to complement the subdued coloring of modern woods. Applied over the glaze, these brilliant colors retain all their original brightness and stand out vividly on the ivory-white body.

One of the patterns which is called South Wind is especially designed to "warm up" the somewhat cold atmosphere of a dining room with chromium pieces or furniutre of the new blond woods. It shows a scattering of aster heads in deep purple, blue, orrange and pink. Another, named West Wind, has a swirl of dying leaves in rich autumn colors. Very striking is a design known as Moonlight, which has a large stylized lily pad in the center of the plates, developed in green and pink and suggesting the evening quiet of a garden pool.

For those who prefer delicate tracery there is Caprice, with small poppy-like flowers and lacy forsythia leaves in different colors on the various pieces, carrying out an ensemble idea. Gossamer is another dainty design, showing tropical palms and ferns in red and purple. The remaining pattern in this Coquette shape is Emerald, which displays tiny shamrocks with massed center decoration and random leaves.

The shape of these new dinnerware designs, as well as the decorations, is intended to counterbalance the furnishings. To relieve the straight lines of modern furniture there are rippled edges on the plates; and the platters, open vegetable dishes and pickle dishes are in diamond shape. The porringer shape of the soup plates makes them suitable for breakfast cereal, too. The handles of the cups are designed like the wing of a bird, with a curve that fits the thumb.

Mr. Morsman, Miss Reisinger Are Married

Greenwich Resident Is Wed; Bride Is Descendant of President Harrison.

Miss Edmee Roberta Reisinger, daughter of Mrs. Mary McKee Reisinger, of Greenwich, Conn., and of Mr. Curt H. Reisinger, of New York, was married at Greenwich at noon yesterday to Mr. Joseph Henry Morsman, jr. The bride's mother was presented to Washington society several seasons ago by her late grandmother, Mrs. James Robert McKee, who was the daughter of President Benjamin Harrison and was his hostess during the closing months of his Administration.

The Rev. Minot C. Morgan performed the ceremony which took place at the home of the bride's grandfather. Members of the immediate families and a few close friends only were present.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore her grandmother's wedding gown of heavy brocaded satin with a fitted bodice and the lace veil of her great-grandmother, the late Mrs. Adolphus Busch, of St. Louis. She carried orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Mary Harrison McKee, the bride's sister, was maid of honor and wore a blue frock with hat and accessories to match. Mr. Kimball Morsman served as his brother's best man.

After a brief wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Morsman will make their home in Chicago.

The bride attended school in Greenwich, Conn., and Mount Vernon Seminary in Washington, after which she studied at Webber College in Boston. She is a niece of Mrs. Russell B. Harrison and Mrs. Marthena Harrison Williams, of Washington.

Mr. Morsman attended the Hill School and was graduated from Yale in 1934. He is a member of Beta Theta Pi.

Lansburghs Fashions for 1937 Are Approved By America's Leading Style Authorities

BEHIND THE SCENES WITH YOUR EASTER OUTFIT

Haven't you wondered, "How does a store buyer know what to select when she goes to the markets? Does she guess? Does she pick her pet colors? How can she know what is going to be fashionable?"

It would amaze you to see what a welter of criss-crossing information is back of a Lansburgh high fashion! Months ahead we receive tips from America's leading authorities. Bulletins arrive in every mail, keeping us in close touch with what is going on all over the world. A bachelor king vacations in the Tyrol —watch peasant trends. A clever woman brings a complete wardrobe of Beige to Miami —her sensational success warns us that Beige has something. Schiaparelli feminizes her suits—we get the news by cable.

FASHION CLINICS SHOW THE WHOLE PICTURE

Months ahead, our buyers attend Fashion Clinics that pre-view styles. It is vitally important to "stand off" and get a clear picture of how new accessories are influenced by dresses, how the latest coat collars are changing hat lines.

Amos Parrish and Jeanne Lombard, Fashion Director of our New York Offices, conduct the most important of these Clinics. They collect, analyze and predict with uncanny accuracy the fads and fashions to come. Between Clinics a blizzard of bulletins gives us the news, hot and fresh.

ORIGINAL SOURCES TAPPED FOR STYLE INFORMATION

"Catching up on her reading" is a rigorous chore for a Lansburgh Buyer. Women's Wear Daily, Harper's, Vogue—and of course, the fashion columnists in Washington papers share their wealth of knowledge with her. The fashion columns by Miss Ehlen of The Post and Miss Babs Lincoln of the Herald, give us many a style tip.

No, you'd scarcely say that a Lansburgh buyer does much guessing in the market. Each outfit that you buy at Lansburgh's has this immense mass of information to verify its fashion authenticity!

"Of Shoes and Ships."

We went to see Robert Kerr, chemist in charge of the meat inspection laboratory, for the one purpose of finding out whether mono sodium glutamate really tastes like chicken. Someone at the Agriculture Department said it did, but anyway, it doesn't. We found Kerr, himself, much more interesting than the jar of mono sodium glutamate he obligingly set out for us to taste of, and this for several reasons.

Kerr has an amazing and delightful facility for talking at one moment of say, shoes and ships, and, with the most graceful flexibility, turning the subject off to cabbage and kings. He had scarcely finished telling how some manufacturers put mono sodium glutamate in dog food to make the dogs think they are eating chicken instead of soybean flour, when of a sudden he obliqued into the fact that Gen. R. E. Lee had eggs for breakfast every morning, without exception, during the Civil War.

And as suddenly from this point, he reflected how easy it is to teach a horse to observe red traffic lights, while dogs seem insensible to color indications. Kerr knows this from observation: He has seen milk-wagon horses observe red traffic signals with a precision certain citizens might learn. And he has seen trained dogs leading blind men with no other cue for street crossing than the drifting and halting of the pedestrian crowds.

A moment later, he was relating how Andrew Jackson never was beaten by anything, by neither the British nor the devil. And then he was denying that any ranchman could truthfully say he never was thrown by a horse. "I was raised in Kansas when the West was wild, and there's an old saying out there that any man who claims he never was thrown is a liar. From this point he claimed beef as the best of all human foods and from that point asked us to taste some mono sodium glutamate. It doesn't taste like chicken.

Beware, says the Social Security Board and the Civil Service Commission, against "lavish promises" made by self-styled "Social Security Correspondence Schools" and mail order training courses claiming to prepare you for Social Security jobs. To begin with, the board's permanent organization now is well established, and in the second place, all positions of the types being advertised must be filled both for Washington and its field offices by persons with civil service status. Right now more than 35,000 applications for positions are on file.

"Those who offer the courses, with a direct or implied promise that they will automatically lead to positions with the board, are either willfully deluding their prospects or else do not know the qaulifications necessary for appointment," the Civil Service Commission said.

W. S. Alexander, administrator, Federal Alcohol Administration, says it isn't so. The disbelieving eyebrow was raised at a distiller's publicized statement that his whisky will bring you up "bright and early the next morning, ready to do the kind of work that'll get you the better job you're hoping for." "Misleading," says Alexander, who has issued an order for the distiller to show cause why his distilling and rectifying permits should not be suspended.

Good-by and a Hand.

Ida E. Smith retires this week from her long-held job as matron at Harwoman for the Interstate Commerce Commission. A Government employe brought us an official notice of her leave-taking and asked that she be given a good hand . . . She is liked by everybody over there," he said.

In a recent memorandum, the commission secretary said of the colored woman: "Her service in all capacities to which she has been assigned has been of the highest order and most commendable." Ida, as she is known to thousands of Commerce employes, entered the commission's service as an unskilled laborer on September 22, 1908. Now the employes consider they should give some parting expression and have fixed this afternoon at 3 for a presentation program. This will be held in Hearing Room B.

Many Will Attend, but . .

The American Wildlife Institute announces its Second North American Wildlife Conference—to be held in St. Louis March 1-4—with a pamphlet program on which a great drove of pictured wild geese are flying across. Taking it in hand, one is much more intrigued by the notion of drawing a bead on one of the pictured geese than in reading the material about the convention. Someone's handwriting on the margin indicates there "will be a large representation at the conference from the Biological Survey and other Federal conservation agencies." All the same, the pictured drove of wild geese seems to us the most interesting part of the pamphlet.

Well, I'll Tell You . . . . . By Bob Burns

I heard a lecturer say one time that the only way to fool people is to keep your mouth shut. But I could've gone him one better and told him that sometimes even that don't work.

Uncle Sanky went into town one day with a wagonload of watermelons and he took his boy, Dillard, along. When they got into town, Uncle Sanky told Dillard, he says "I've got to go into the Hardware Store for a while and you sit here and watch the watermelons." He says "Now if anybody comes along, just keep your mouth shut and they won't find out how dumb you are."

Well, while Uncle Sanky was gone, a couple of ladies came by and they asked Dillard how much the watermelons was. Dillard sat there and he didn't open his mouth. The lady says "Young man, I asked you how much the watermelons are." And Dillard still didn't say nothin'. This lady turned to her friend and says "The poor boy must be awfully dumb," and they went on. After while Uncle Sanky came back to the wagon and he says, "Well, Dillard, how did you make out?" and Dillard says "Well, Paw, I done what you told me, but they found out anyhow."

Boy Bandit Tells Police Of Holdups

Names 2 Others; One Is Captured; Second Flees in Raid.

'Reign of Terror' Started With Theft of Auto, Youth Asserts.

Richard Carroll Parks, 19, pimply-faced red head, sat quietly in the robbery squad office at Police Headquarters yesterday and admitted he led two companions on a brief two-week crime escapade which included eight holdups, a housebreaking and the theft of two automobiles.

He gave police the names of his two associates who led police a dizzy chase from February 7 until Parks was seized in his home at 6916 Willow street, Takoma Park, Md., Monday afternoon.

Parks implicated Silvo Joseph Daneri, 23, 114 Quincy place northeast, as the driver of the getaway car used in the daring stickups, and James Phelps, 18, 59 Randolph northwest. Daneri was captured Monday night, but Phelps managed to elude police when he leaped from second-floor window of his home.

The reign of terror of the three desperadoes began, Parks stated, February 7 when they stole from a parking lot at Ninth and H streets northwest, an automobile owned by former Chief of Detectives William Shelby. Using the stolen car, the youths held up a drugstore on Mount Pleasant street, a lunchroom at Georgia avenue and Webster street and a filling station just seven blocks away at Georgia avenue and Farragut street northwest. These jobs netted the band $135.

Looted Sports Store.

Sunday, Parks asserted, the boys limited their activities to looting the Atlas Sport Goods store in the 900 block on D street, of $350 worth of rifles and revolvers.

Armed with the new weapons, the robber band began their marauding again the following Saturday. They stole another automobile from a Seventh street parking lot. Shortly after this they committed five holdups in less than two hours.

The first theft occurred in the 1900 block of Pennsylvania avenue northwest when they robbed a grocery store of $35. A drug store at First and K streets northwest, a liquor store in the 900 block H street northwest, a newspaper substation in the 2300 block Wisconsin avenue northwest, and another store at 1800 New Hampshire avenue northwest, were robbed in quick succession, according to Park's confession.

Robbery squad detectives seized the youthful Parks in his home Monday after his mother, Mrs. Richard Morley, came to Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson to seek his advice. She told Thompson she thought her son had become addicted to narcotics.

During the conversation with Thompson, Mrs. Morley described her son and said he threatened to kill her. The description fitted the "red-haired bandit" sought by police.

Questioned Mother.

Lieut. John H. Fowler and Detective Sergts. Elmer Lewis, E. E. Thompson, J. J. Tolson and W. V. Christian questioned the woman and persuaded her to go with them. Parks was seized in his home with four revolvers.

Taken to the Twelfth Precinct Station, he admitted to police he was the "red-haired bandit." He told police however he did not use dope and never had any contact with it.

Phelps escaped police Monday night when he leaped from the window of his home. A quick flash to all precincts over the radio sent scout cars hurrying to cover all bridges and roads leading out of town.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, complimenting his men on their work in halting the youthful terrorist gang, said Phelps' arrest "was just a matter of time."

"We know who he is and he will be in custody within 24 hours," Thompson declared.

Parks was sentenced to 1 to 4 years in 1935, when convicted of housebreaking. He was on probation at the time of his arrest.

When he was sentenced Mrs. Morley charged before the House Committee that police were making her son the goat, while his companions were escaping punishment. He then was placed on probation.

January Relief Expenses Here Drop $88,000

Decrease From 1936 Seen Due to 'Employables' Leaving Rolls.

Expenditures for direct relief in the District dropped approximately $88,000 last month as compared with figures for January, 1936, according to the monthly report of Hazel I. Spicer, statistician for the Public Assistant Division of the Board of Public Welfare.

During January of this year, the report showed, 6,185 relief cases of all types received payments totaling $193,064.22. For January of last year, a total of $281,530.20 was expended for 9,865 cases, the report to Welfare Director Elwood Street revealed.

The decrease in expenditures and cases was attributed by Street to the recent elimination of so-called "employables" from direct relief rolls.

An average of $31.41 was paid to each relief case during the month, it was reported. Dependent children, numbering 967, received a total of $47,110.57. Home care cases numbered 272, with expenditures totaling $17,553.07.

Old age assistance was rendered in 1,616 cases, with payments amounting to $40,710.25. The needy blind, numbering 109, received $2,629.10. For all other relief cases, including investigations, a total of $85,061.23 was expended, the report showed.

As compared with figures for January of this year, the report showed a slight increase over the previous month. In December, 1936, a total of $190,802.45 was paid to 5,942 cases.

The increase, Street said, was due to acceptance of cases under investigation during December.

New Offer Prevents Hotel Workers' Strike

Possibility of a strike of waiters and chefs, affecting 1,200 of the 1,400 kitchen and dining room employes in Washington hotels and restaurants, was averted yesterday as members of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' Alliance, Local No. 781, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, considered proposals made by representatives of the hotel managements.

Although no definite scale has as yet been agreed on, it was generally decided that no strike would be called. Morris L. Verbov, business representative of the alliance, said last night the association had offered a "preference shop" which would give union members "first call" and a "slight increase" in wages.

D. C. Asked to Arrest Taxi Union Organizer

Baltimore, Feb. 16 (AP).—Sheriff Joseph C. Deegan, of Baltimore City, asked Washington police today to be on the lookout for Harry Cohen, taxi union organizer.

A bench warrant, issued by Judge Eugene O. Dunne, charged Cohen with instigating and abetting riot and disorderly conduct in connection with the taxicab drivers' strike here.

Cohen failed to appear in court today to post bond. The warrant set bond at $15,000.

District Fiscal Data Obtained From Citizens

Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, last night said "much valuable information" had been obtained at an all-day conference with leading Washington business and professional men.

The witnesses were questioned in informal fashion at an "off-the-record" session as to their views on the District's fiscal problems.

"The testimony of these gentlemen will be invaluable to the sub-committee," Collins said.

Among the witnesses consulted were E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel; Dr. Sterling Ruffin, former president of the District Medical Society; Col. Julius I. Peyser, lawyer; John Saul, real estate operator; Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank; Frank R. Jelleff, president of Frank R. Jelleff, Inc., and Edwin C. Graham, president of the National Electric Supply Co.

Others were interviewed, but their names were not disclosed.

Today the school estimates will be discussed again, and the public library needs probably will follow.

As the sub-committee is running somewhat behind schedule this week, it is likely the citizens' forum will not be held before Saturday or Monday.

The sub-committee probably will not have time to hear J. L. Jacogs, director of the recent fiscal relations study.

ABC Unit Acts To End Liquor Permit Rackets

Will Seek Law to Prevent Transfers of Licenses, Halt 'Chiseling.'

Recent recommendations of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, seeking to eliminate alleged "racketeering" and "chiseling" among local liquor and beer dealers, were approved yesterday by the District Commissioners.

Legislation, the Commissioners decided, will be sought to ban the transfer or sale of liquor licenses and at the same time, it was agreed to fix a limitation on the number of "on sale" whisky and beer permits.

Requesting a prohibition on the sale or transfer of licenses, Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, acting chairman of the board, told the Commissioners:

"The board feels this is a very necessary amendment to present regulations as it will do away with the racket which has developed in the sale of licenses for exorbitant prices."

It was pointed out that certain retail liquor dealers have sold licenses for as much as $10,000. Legislation will be sought to require prospective purchasers of existing liquor establishments to obtain new permits, rather than the present system of transfers.

With the Commissioners' approval of a limitation in the number of "on sale" licenses, the order will become law within five days. Class "C" permits—by-the-drink liquor, wine and beer—will be limited to 300. The number of class "D" licenses—by-the-drink beer and light wines—was set at 400.

The ABC Board explained that this number of establishments was "adequate to supply needs of the public" and would reduce "chiseling due to economic hazards."

McCarran's Request for Hearing to Be Given Committee.

Unit Will Decide on Whether to Consider Measure.

Senator Bulow, chairman of the Senate Civil Service Committee, yesterday promised Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, to take up with his committee the request of McCarran for public hearings on his bill to raise the salaries of Government employes in the low brackets.

Previously Senator Bulow had stated he saw no necessity for the hearings because of the Budget Bureau's disclosure that the President was having a special study made of the whole subject of reclassification of Government employes and related matters.

McCarran told Bulow that he believed much valuable information could be obtained by the committee while awaiting the President's report of hearings were held on his revised pay bill.

Hearings Continued.

The House Civil Service Committee meanwhile continued its hearings on the Ramspeck bill to extend the civil service to all executive departments.

Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, and other witnesses indorsed the measure in principle but agreed with the President's committee on reorganization that examinations should be non-competitive rather than open to all comers.

Other witnesses were Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, vice president of the National League of Women Voters, and Commander Carl H. Cotter, executive assistant to the National Emergency Council.

Position Explained.

Steward explained his organization's position on the examinations thus:

"Because of the great expense, time, and staff which would be necessary for the giving of competitive examinations, we do not feel that the plan is at present feasible. Furthermore, it must be recognized as a practical matter just what an examination is.

"The importance of the probationary period is great. The Government should take advantage of the experiences gained by its employes, both in the new and in the old established agencies. Simply to ignore the net results of it would not be sound practice from any standpoint.

Weeding Out Seen.

"In many of the new agencies a gradual weeding out process has been taking place during the past four years; in a sense a probationary period.

"In bringing the incumbents, with their long experience, to qualify noncompetitively, there is no essential weakening of the merit principle; for successors would be required to qualify competitively.

"In view of the large turn-over in Federal personnel, no great length of time would elapse before all candidates would be taking competitive examinations for these positions."

Forum Votes For Repeal Of Red Rider

The "pink rider" approved by the House, H. C. Phillips, who introduced the motion, said, "etachers are permitted to teach communism, but are not allowed to advocate it. This, however, will not be satisfactory as teachers still will be afraid to mention communism in the classrooms."

In another resolution legalized horse racing was vigorously opposed on the grounds it would be against the best interests of the District.

Proposed plans by Dr. George H. Ruhland, District health officer for several clinics in the poorer sections of the city, were given support by the group. These clinics, the forum explained, would be for the education of poorer families in combating tuberculosis and social diseases.

In connection with the group's health committee report a resolution opposing a proposed bill to eliminate vaccination as a requisite to enter public schools was adopted.

Hamilton Says G. O. P. Beaten By Propaganda

'Undoubted' Prosperity Also Aided, Silver Srping Audience Told.

John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, told 200 listeners at Silver Spring, Md., last night that the principal reasons for the defeat of the Republican Party in the last election were the "undoubted" prosperity of the country and the "undoubted" propaganda put forth by Federal agencies during the previous three years.

Saying that the Republican Party was at its peak in June and July Hamilton declared, "As we went toward November 3 we saw a Nation marching politically on its pocketbook."

Likening the party in November to "a fat old man looking at a parade," he said:

"Must Look Forward."

"It is too early to tell about the future but the Republican Party must convince the people that its proposals are sound and will result in more material benefits than what Roosevelt will offer.

"The curtain has rung down on 1936," he said. "We must look forward." Admitting that the Republicans now form the opposition party he warned that they must not become the "obstruction party."

"In the next election," he said, "we are going to be judged by our record in Congress today."

Hamilton limited his comment on Roosevelt's recent Federal courts proposal to the simple statement that "every Republican should be interested as an American in the issue created during the last two weeks."

Snow Reduces Audience.

Others speaking at the meeting included Representative Melvin Maas, of Minnesota; Walter W. Dawson, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee for Montgomery County; County Commissioner Paul M. Coughlin, Park Commissioner Wilton T. Allen and John Coffman, retiring president of Montgomery County's Thirteenth Election District Republican Club, under whose auspices Hamilton appeared.

Woodside School, where the meeting was held, was about a third filled for the meeting. Leaders said that many, including Gov. Nice, were prevented by bad weather from attending.

House Group To Consider Mapes Taxes

D. C. Proposals to Be Taken From Obscurity Today by Norton.

Jacobs, McAneny to Be Invited to Sessions of Sub-Committees.

The Mapes District tax bills, ignored for the last four years, will be given an active status today when Chairman Norton of the House District Committee refers them to the sub-committee set up to study the revenue proposals of the Jacobs report.

Passed by the House, the measures were allowed to die in the Senate District Committee.

The measures in general are the same as four of the five revenue proposals made by the Jacobs committee. The Mapes tax recommendations are in legislative form, however, whereas none of the Jacobs recommendations have been so drafted as yet.

Three Proposals Same.

Both committees recommended (1) a local income tax, (2) an inheritance tax, (3) a 2-cent increase in the gasoline tax.

Both also proposed substitution of a motor vehicle weight tax for the personal property levy on commercial vehicles, but the Mapes committee proposal was that private autos be taxed on the same basis.

The two sub-committees of the House District Committee decided in executive session yesterday to hold joint sessions for a time at least with Jacobs and probably George McAneny, New York banker and chairman of the President's fiscal relations committee, as the first witnesses.

To Follow Supply Bill.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, chairman of the sub-committee on taxation, was authorized to invite them to appear before the point sub-committees.

The hearing probably will be scheduled close to the time when Jacobs testifies before the House sub-committee on appropriations.

On account of the uncertainty of the anticipated District deficit for the next fiscal year, the sub-committees probably will not take up the tax measures until after the 1938 District supply bill is reported to the House.

Resolution Backs Child Vaccination

The Petworth Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution against the bill which would eliminate compulsory vaccination of public school children here.

In another resolution the association approved a bill to make trespass on public school property a misdemeanor punishable by a fine.

It was announced that a letter has been written to Postmaster Vincent Burke requesting that a mail box be placed at New Hampshire avenue and Farragut street.

Screen Player Devises Novel Drama School

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Feb. 16. — Fragile, smoky-haired Margaret Lindsay has a scheme to trap the deathless words of Hollywood directors and turn them to a neat profit in a proposed drama school.

She believes that if all the directorial pearls given off as free vapor here were canned and cast before stage-struck students a few might surprise themselves, the pearlcasters and the world by learning to act.

To that end the lass has conspired with Soundman Henry Ross to keep his sound track running while Errol Taggart tells of Lindsay and the cost of a little opera called "Song of the City" between takes.

To Be Film Textbook.

Later she'll show the finished picture to classes, halting the film here and there while the voice of the director tells how it got that way.

Lindsay figures that the cost, M. G. M. permitting, will amount only to the price of sound track, and wholesale at that.

So far as this column knows, however, Miss Lindsay hasn't reckoned the possible effect on her impressionable pupils' diction of the voices of directors. Her class might wind up talking like Herman Bing.

"Honey" Harlow

Spectacular Jean Harlow, who served a long term in platinum and a short one in "brownette" tressses, while coyly eyeing titian dye, has finally decided what kind of blonde she is, and is ready to tell the world about it.

"I'm honey-colored," she said. "I feel more natural this way. Somehow other shades just didn't suit me.

"I admit that 'platinum blonde' tag got me plenty of publicity, but that was in the day when I had much to learn about acting. Trade marks aren't necessary any more. We've got past the point where stars had to be sold to the public like cans of soup."

When she abandoned her "can of soup" a year ago, however, Finished Actress Harlow confided the reason was she is no longer a kitten, and maturing blonde hair tends to streak.

Envoy, Once Here, To Wed Duchess

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—Mrs. Nicholas Brady, wealthy New York widow and papal duchess, announced last night she will marry William Babington Macauley, Irish Free State minister to the Vatican, "late in the spring."

The announcement said the place as well as the date, of the wedding is "unsettled."

Macauley, who was counselor for the Irish Free State in Washington from 1924 to 1930 when he served as consul general in New York City, is in Rome. Mrs. Brady is at her Fifth aveune home.

Mrs. Brady's husband, Nicholas Brady, public utilities operator, died in 1930, leaving an estate reputed to be worth about $10,000,000.

Cooking in Flood Area Jails Memphis Man

"I was just cooking some beans," the colored man said.

He said he was unaware he needed authority from the health department to return to his flooded home. He was jailed on a charge of violating a health ordinance.

Reduction Is Shown In Medical Students

Chicago, Feb. 16 (AP).—A decline in the number of the Nation's medical students was reported to the American Medical Association's congress on education today.

Dr. Harold Rypins, secretary of the New York State Board of Medical Examinations, attributed the decrease to stricter entrance requirements and limitations placed on the size of freshmen classes at schools of medicine. He said new enrollments in medical colleges in the United States dropped from 6,456 in 1930 to 5,996 in 1935.

U. S. Missionary Applies For Chinese Citizenship

Shanghai, Feb. 16 (U.P.).—Carl Marvin Hensley, a missionary in China since 1919, today delivered his passport to the United States Embassy and announced that he had applied for Chinese citizenship.

State Department officials said that the surrender of American citizenship, a step taken in China by Carl Hensley, a missionary, was a rare occurrence although they have no definite figures on the number.

Registered Mail Pouch With $10,000 Is Stolen

Boston, Feb. 16 (AP).—Theft of a registered mail pouch containing about $10,000 was announced today by Federal officials. The pouch was stolen from a truck Friday night, somewhere between Arlington and the North Postal Station, they said. The driver reported he made three stops enroute to Boston.

Rescuers Speed to Aid 7 Alaska Ship Victims

Juneau, Alaska, Feb. 16 (AP).—Coast Guardsmen sped toward a remote Indian village on Admiralty Island tonight to rescue seven ocean travelers, beached after the 500-ton motorship Zapora foundered in a storm on the rocks 80 miles south of here Sunday.

Water flooded the engine room, putting lights and radio out of commission. The 7 passengers and 20 crew members reached shore in life boats. The passengers continued on to Angoon after the chief officer and three sailors had rowed a lifeboat to Killisnoo to wireless Angoon for aid.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

The Rotund "Fats" Waller, Coming to the Capitol, Has Had a Diversified Career in Amusement World

The Son of a Harlem Minister, He Has Toured Both Europe and America as Star of Stage and Cabarets; Mrs. Carter ("Chic") Barron Survives a Crisis; The Postman Rings Several Times and Leaves Several Interesting Communications; News Notes of Theater.

THERE is, it seems, more to this orchestra conductor, composer, swing artist and master of ceremonies, "Fats" Waller, than meets the eye, or even the ear.

Thomas "Fats" Waller was born on May 21, 1904, the son of a minister. He played the organ and sang in the choir—although probably not both at the same time—in the Abyssinian Baptist Church in Harlem, New York, where his father was pastor.

BELL.

Then, in the face of parental protest, he accepted an offer to sing and play at LeRoy "Baron" Wilkins' cabaret. Here he remained until 1924, doubling occasionally as a theater organist and making player-piano rolls for the Q-R-S Co.

The next year, Waller appeared in vaudeville with the famous blues singer, Bessie Smith; later wrote the music for the show, "Keep Shuffling," and next toured the Publix Theaters.

In 1930 he wrote the lyrics for the musical comedy, "Hot Chocolates," and at the close of the run of this attraction, toured Europe, playing the principal night clubs of London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna. Returning to America, he drifted into radio, organized his own orchestra and has been heard over the networks and from the vaudeville stages ever since.

"Fats" Waller and his orchestra will headline the stage portion of the bill at Loew's Capitol Theater the week of Friday, February 26. During the course of the new program which he will present, he will demonstrate his versatility as violinist, pianist, pipe organist and master of ceremonies.

• • • •

It is with profound gratification and rejoicing that this column is able to state that Mrs. Carter Barron, wife of the Eastern divisional manager of Loew's, Inc., is on the high road to recovery from an emergency operation that brought her close to the brink of the great beyond. "Chic" was in such desperate plight that blood transfusions were necessary to keep the spark of life even feebly glowing. The first was volunteered by Kay Ford, wife of Gene Ford, manager of Loew's Capitol, whose blood, fortunately, matched that of the friend for whose life she was fighting. The crisis now seems to be past and Washington's entire theatrical colony rejoices in that fact.

• • • •

It was just as I thought it would be at the National Theater on Monday night, when Norman Bel Geddes' superb production of "Dead End" opened to a prompt 8 o'clock curtain. Stragglers kept crawling over seated patrons up to the hour of about a quarter of nine!

It was possible for District Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and Dan Sultan, Maj. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police, and others of importance in the conduct of District affairs, to reach their seats before the first curtain, but it evidently was not possible for a horde of deeply decollete and highly starched ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the upper crust to tear themselves away from their desserts and wine bibbling until so late that they practically dismembered the play and deranged the audience who cared enough about it to be there on time.

If these socalled "society" mavericks care no more about a play than to arrive at it when it is half over, why do they go at all?

I repeat my suggestion to Manager Edmund Plohn of the National that he adopt the Katharine Cornell policy of seating nobody between scenes of "Dead End."

And let that be a lesson to them.

• • • •

It will be of interest to Washington that Gen. Robert E. Lee, Stonewall Jackson and other Southern heroes of the War Between the States are to be impersonated in "Under Southern Stars," the Vitaphone Technicolor short subject, which will be one of the major subsidiaries of the bill opening Friday on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. The famous Confederate charge at Chancellorsville is one of the highlights of this stirring featurette. Fred Lawrence, Jane Bryan and Fritz Leiber are in the cast—if that conveys anything to you.

• • • •

The mails have been clogged with interesting communications of late. There have come to the drama desk these past few days interesting and informative letters from Edward De Selding Melcher, former drama editor of the Washington Star, now in Hollywood; Maxine Doyle, pseudo-Washingtonian, for three years mistress of ceremonies at the Earle, where the radiant Miss Audrey Seiber now serves in the same capacity; Joe E. Brown, who, as a flip monologist once remarked, was born with a gold platter in his mouth; Miss Alva M. Joesting, an ardent advocate of the theater in Washington, and Theron Bamberger of the Theater Guild's staff of stentors.

Mr. Melcher writes three foolscap pages from Hollywood and betrays the fact that he is playing around with the creme de la creme of the film colony's distinguished personnel—Howard Strickling, of M-G-M; Bob Sisk and Howard Benedict, of RKO-Radio; Johnny Beal, leading man with Katharine Hepburn in "The Little Minister;" Mr. "Asylum" Seebrook, Dr. Arnold Genthe, Elizabeth Patterson, Una Merkel, Anna May Wong, Walter Winchell ("Gosh, how old and gray he's gotten!"), Azadia Newman, portrait painter; Rochelle Hudson, the Irvin S. Cobbs, Tyrone Power and Lucius ("just out for the day") Beebe. Eddie seems to be doing all right for himself.

More of the other letters later—space seems to be getting a little short.

• • • •

Mr. Melcher's successor on the Star, Master Jay Carmody, incidentally, is entitled to his meed of distinction, too. Mr. Carmody, as demonstrated on the dance floor of the Variety Club one recent night, is by way of being a bit of an acrobat. "Snakehips" does him no whit of justice. He begins where "snakehips" leave off—backovers, nip-ups, broad jumps, handstands and whatnot. And then just to prove his versatility he is apt as not to go into an esthetic dance, aided and abetted by Harry MacArthur, of his own staff, and Ben Washer, press representative for "Dead End." Art at its zenith. Really you have no idea—or have you?

Speaking-out-of-Turn Note.

Just take yesterday's last line and append it to this column. I spoke one day too soon about that Sunday night snow storm.

Civic Unit Attacks 3-Point Fiscal Plan

The three-point fiscal formula of the Jacobs report was opposed in a resolution adopted Monday night by the Sixteenth Street Heights Citizens Association. The action was taken after Oliver E. Sweet analyzed the report for the group.

The association backed the Public Utilities Commission in its granting the Capital Transit Co. the right to purchase 45 one-man street cars. The association went on record as urging the company to establish the token fare on the Sixteenth street buses, which now have 10-cent fare

Dr. Walter E. Price told the association of plans to build a Community Church at the corner of Alaska avenue and Kalmia street.

Dr. Dafoe Recovering.

Masked Man Fires Home to Cover Up Robbery of Guest

A masked bandit set fire to the home of Mrs. C. L. Walcott, 19 West Kirke street, Chevy Chase, Md., Monday night, to distract attention while robbing one of her bridge-playing guests of her purse and $3, police said.

The involved scheme to obtain $3 in the pocketbook was described to police by Mrs. Walcott.

"We had just finished a rubber of bridge," she said, "and were in the kitchen getting a bite to eat when a tall white man with a scarf around his face ran into the house from the front and snatched the purse of Mrs. Elizabeth M. Vose, of 405 Edgewood avenue, Silver Spring, Md."

"After he ran out of the house," she continued, "we smelled smoke coming from the basement and investigated. The wood pile was in flames. In another section of the cellar a chair was ablaze. In still another part some papers were afire."

In Film Play of Coast Guards

When RKO-Radio's production of "Sea Devils" reaches the Washington screen at RKO-Keith's Theater tomorrow, Victor McLaglen, Preston Foster and Ida Lupino will be seen in the principal roles. The story concerns the adventures, romances and hazards encountered by the branch of the service that is on active duty the year 'round. Preston Foster and Ida Lupino are pictured above.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, Feb. 16.—Idol chatter; Where in the world do Adolphe, Carole, Grahame, and other stars find those extra vowels? Katharine Hepburn always appears out of breath after running the gamut of emotions. Nutshell description of Eleanor Powell: Beautiful. Olivia de Havilland does elegant imitations of mooing cows, barking dogs and clucking hens. When director Archie Mayo wants set-silence, he shouts: "Quiet, all you charming—phooey—people!" Laugh alikes: Victor McLaglen and George Bancroft.

CAROLE LOMBARD.

The walls of the male powder room at the Trocadero are papered with La Vie Parisienne drawings, which Will Hays would never okeh. Ever notice how Edmund Lowe's eyebrows clutter for dramatic scenes? If you like puns, this came in the morning's mail: If Mary Astor to dinner, Anne Shirley would accept. Marlene Dietrich buys her suits ten at a crack from a gents' tailor, which seconds her to Adolphe Menjou. Theater marquees would be letter-crowded if Robert Montgomery and Jeannette were to co-star.

Bet the expression "George Arliss' slick suspenders slipped" would tongue-twist nervous radio announcers. Franchot Tone promised Joan Crawford he would never look heroines in the eyes when he dialogued "I love you." Wonder if Laurel and Hardy take separate vacations? Boris Karloff in make-up reminds me of my boyhood year when I had to pass a graveyard en route to night school. Wonder how many people think Ricardo Cortez is Spanish. John Boles has a Julu of a left-handed spinner in tennis.

No girl was ever taken more completely into Hollywood's heart than Mary Blackford. She is the young actress, who on a verge of screen success, was paralyzed as a result of a tragic auto crash. Soon after the accident, all Hollywood joined hands in a benefit dinner dance which netted $6,000 for the stricken girl.

Today her sickroom is visited daily by well known stars. A group of young players have rigged up a backseat apparatus making it possible to take Mary on motor drives. During football season, arrangements were made to drive onto the field, so that she might watch the games. She is taken on stretchers to movie theaters, and her loyal friends often honor her with gay parties.

One of the most heart-pressing scenes I ever witnessed took place at a New Year's party for Miss Blackford. At the stroke of midnight, not one voice of the entire chorus was happier or noisier than that of Mary when the "Happy New Year's" were shouted. Yet she has not walked more than a few steps in three years.

A thought that lends my throat a stuffy feeling is this: If she does recover and resumes her career fight, will she ever be as happy as she is today, surrounded by loyal, affectionate friends?

You might not think it, but Joan Crawford likes to get away from her professional name at home. I mean she prefers to be Mrs. Franchot Tone, and has so instructed household help. She once told me that she spends hours thinking up ways and means of using her married title more often. So, one afternoon she called Constance Bennett on the telephone and announced to the butler, "Joan Tone is calling." The servant let the receiver dangle while he conferred with Connie. Presently he returned with, "I'm sorry, but Miss Bennett says she does not know Joe Cohen."

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Experts laugh up their sleeves at beginners for cashing their aces and Kings at the first opporunity, but I cecently watched a hand in which the laugh was on the other side. A contract that should have been defeated four tricks doubled went down only two, when the so-called "expert" defender coyly held up his Ace of trumps.

East, dealer.

	♠ 6 5 3 ♡ Q 4 3 ◇ K 8 7 5 4 ♣ 7 5
♠ A 10 9 ♡ 8 7 5 ◇ J 10 3 2 ♣ A K 8	West East North South	♠ J 2 ♡ K J 10 2 ◇ A Q 6 ♣ Q J 9 2
	♠ K Q 8 7 4 ♡ A 9 6 ◇ 9 ♣ 10 6 4 3

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	1 ♣	Pass
1 ♡	1 ♠	Pass	Pass
2 ♣	2 ♠	Pass	Pass
Double	Pass	Pass	Pass

East's bidding was as good as South's was bad. The one spade overcall was dangerous enough without the further neck-stretching involved in his rebid. East, knowing that he was opposed by an overbidder in the South position, deliberately underbid in calling only two clubs on the second round, and his strategy should have been well rewarded when South fell for the bait. West, having opened a weak hand, acted correctly in passing thereafter, and East's double of two suades, considering that he had only the Jack and deuce of trumps, was a tribute to his imagination.

West opened the club King and, when East signalled with the deuce, shifted to the eight of hearts. Dummy ducked, and East's ten went to South's Ace. The singleton diamond was led; West split his honors, and dummy's King was won by the Ace. Now East correctly shifted to the deuce of spades; declarer played the spade Queen, and now West made the horrible mistake of allowing the Queen to hold. Certainly it should have taken no imagination on his part to realize that his partner (East) would not have doubled two spades with the singleton deuce. On the other hand, South's rebid definitely marked him for five spades and, therefore, East could have only one more. Whatever that one war, no loss could result from winning the spade trick and returning the ten-spot.

When the Queen held the trick, declarer returned a low club; West played the eight, and East had to overtake with the nine. East properly led his Jack of spades, but this time declarer ducked, and now West could not overtake without losing a trump trick. As the one hope of putting West on lead in order to draw dummy's remaining trump, East shrewdly underled his diamond Queen. But this was futile. Declarer ruffed, and then ruffed a club in dummy. A diamond ruff followed, and now declarer led his last club.

West could have made partial amends at this point by ruffing in with the Ace of spades; but, thoroughly demoralized, he discarded, and poor East, in with the club Queen, was stuck. He had to lay down the King of hearts and give the declarer the heart ueen. A penalty of 700 points had been transformed to one of 300 by West's miserable defense.

This Morning . . .

Without Shirley Povich

By Walter Haight.

The boss ups and leaves—leaves me more space than I have had to fill since the concluding chapter of what the boys in the sports department lovingly refer to as "Bred to Bum." All of which gives me opportunity to confess that I have a telephone-answering complex that borders on a mania. In fact, I come from and I am the head of a family that has always been quick on the draw as far as phone answering is concerned.

HAIGHT.

We Haights have a sort of second nature which allows us to distinguish the difference between the sound of a phone bell and that of other bells. Grandpa Haight, even in his later years an 8-star phone-hurry-up-to-answerer, used to tell us how his great-great-grandfather was curled up in the corner of the belfry the night the Liberty Bell rang until it smashed and he did not know a nation had been born until his mother spanked him to the tune of "Yankee Doodle" instead of "God Save the King" for being late for supper.

My father slept through a four-alarm fire as a member of the Kingsport Volunteer Fire Department because he didn't hear the bell. It was five years after the Board of Education ruled out the old school bell that we Haights were told that it wasn't ringing any more. We hadn't heard it despite the fact that we lived right next to the town's headquarters of learning. In my memory, a Haight has never been known to possess an alarm clock and we still stick to an iron knocker on the front door.

One of my uncles decided some years ago that his family should have one of those new-fangled electric doorbells. It was installed. The following day the minister was invited to dinner. My aunt set the table, put on the food and the family sat around and waited for the minister.

About a half hour later, uncle believed that maybe his brother had decided to give up drinking and sign the pledge for the twenty-second time and the minister was delayed with steering his soul. Anyway, Uncle and Aunt Haight and the little Haights dug in at the signal. Auntie cleaned up the table while uncle and the children played lotto.

About 9 o'clock there came a tapping on the front door. Aunt said, "Pa, you better take a look out front, I coulda sworn I heard somebody dancing a jig on our porch."

Uncle opened the door and there was the minister. He was jigging for all he was worth. "Why, I didn't know you could dance, Brother Herbert," said Uncle. "Why don't you come in out of the cold? Did you just get here?"

"No, I didn't just get here!" snapped the parson, "I was supposed to be here for dinner at 3 o'clock and I arrived at 2 to help your wife with the biscuits."

"I'm terribly sorry," said uncle, "come on in now and warm up."

I'll come in if you'll get some hot water and thaw my finger off this electric button!" returned the minister.

But telephone bells, that is something again. Uncle had four boys who made All-American the first year they ever saw a football through the practice in scrimmages at home that resulted when the phone rang. The little Haights had a habit of diving under the piling and hauling in on the cord—a system that scored them many a point. Uncle put an end to that by having the phone placed an a high shelf and tacking down the cord. He was surprised the next day when one of the boys hanged by his toes from the chandelier, swung over and grabbed the receiver before uncle could loosen my aunt's grip on his ear. There was a sigh of relief among the defeated when it was learned that it was a "wrong number" ring.

I learned early in this sports business that phone-answering was an important part of a night's work. There have been times down through the years when I have been forced to sort of swallow my pride as far as the phones were concerned. I developed into a superior double-phone-answerer, being able to snatch one with my left while holding another receiver with my right. Of course, the French phones allow me to reach near perfection.

However, I never became a two-sides-of-the-room-phone-answerer. That stumped me until I became friendly with the Post operators and talked them into keeping them "clustered" as far as possible.

With this background, I believe I am qualified to say that the most asked question over a sports department phone is "Who won the Kentucky Derby in——." I made this statement most emphatically in the presence of Bill McCormick. Bill gave me the horse laugh and said, "What about the date of the Johnson-Jeffries fight?" I conceded him the place money on that much-asked question and we both yelled down Tony Atchison when he tried to interest us in the score of the Army-Notre Dame game in such and such a year.

I know of only one man who can recite the winners of Kentucky Derbies from start to finish. I have seen a few derbies and I have gone to the files thousands of times to get the horse and the date. However, I stumble through a few years and then falter.

Telegraph Operator Pete Marshall, the man for whom the company retains the old-fashioned key and click method of sending and receiving news, is the derby-naming champion. He learned years ago that "who won the derby" was the tops in sports department questions. He knew that the person who could rattle off "Meridian, in 1911" and "Whiskery, in 1927" would hold the sports department limelight. For a few years we looked them up to try and catch Pete. He has never missed but I believe he takes spring training on the subject about a month before each derby.

It would be a good joke on Pete if we didn't get a single request for the date of past derbies this year. I'm going to lose a lot of fun answering the phone if everyone pastes these derby winners and the dates in his hat.

Pros Sign Dale Prather

With one eye on the gate receipts and the other on outstanding football talent, the Washington Redskins yesterday signed Dale Prather, former George Washington University star, for the 1937 campaign. Ray Flaherty, Redskin coach, signed the husky Colonial after a lengthy conference yesterday. Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

A 6-foot 3-inch individual weighing 215 pounds, Prather is the third Pixlee pupil to join the pro grid ranks. "Tuffy" Leemans, leading ground-gainer in the National League last year, was the first, signing with the New York Giants. He, in turn, interested John Mara, Giant owner, in Ray Hanken, a teammate of Prather's, and he was signed last autumn after playing several games with the Baltimore Orioles.

Prather also was a member of the Orioles, playing after the close of the college season. Baltimore is a member of the Dixie League.

Louis Choice to Stop Brown, Regain Prestige

D. C. Fighter Is Confident He'll Stay

But No One Else Thinks So; Negro Is on Spot, Must Win by Kayo.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Feb. 16.—Joe Louis, suffering from dented prestige as a result of his failure to knock out Bob Pastor, will seek to straighten it out at the expense of Natie Brown when they meet in a scheduled ten-round bout here tomorrow night.

Speaking in round numbers, Brown, who in 1935 stayed ten with the Brown Bomber, declares he can do it again, but the idea is practically original with him. Nobody else thinks so, with the result odds on the fight are prohibitive.

Matchmaker Frank Gatto boosted his estimate on the probable gate today from $25,000 to $30,000, or possibly $35,000. Capacity is $42,000. Louis will receive a 40 per cent cut, Brown 15 per cent. The advance today was about $15,000.

Brown's expressed confidence he can stay the limit, and possibly win, combined with his record of being knocked out only twice in a career dating back nine years, largely is responsible for the boom in interest, despite frank expressions of disbelief he can stay again.

Skeptics pointed out that Louis is on the spot. He must win by a quick knockout or his gate appeal may drop to a point where the Braddock board of control would be without a fountain pen when it comes to signing for the proposed title bout.

Louis is in the peculiar position

Schmarr's 22-Point Spree Prevents Rout; Score at Half Is 35-10.

New York, Feb. 16.—A Catholic University basketball team that was counted upon to furnish the severest opposition had its streak of six straight victories snapped here tonight by Long Island University, 51-36, before 1,000 persons. Save for a brilliant individual performance by Capt. Hermie Schmarr, the Cardinals were hopelessly outclassed in this first game of a home and home series. The two quintets will meet again in Washington March 2.

Schmarr's magnificent shooting which accounted for 22 of his team's 36 tallies prevented a one-sided rout. Held to a single field basket in the first half, at the close of which L. I. U. had assumed a tremendous 35-10 lead, Schmarr broke loose to tally ten field goals and help outscore the home five for this period.

Catholic, conqueror of Geneva, which in turn had nosed out L. I. U., started with the initial handicap of facing a much taller team. Art Hilthouse, 6 foot 4 inch-center, dominated the tap to score 15 points in addition.

It was a scorching first half and any hopes of a Cardinal victory were consumed in the heat of the Blackbird's attack. The home team played as it has seldom done before, running up 14 points before Catholic could tally and finishing with 15 consecutive tallies.

Ten seconds after the opening whistle Ken Norton scored from under the basket and that started the landslide. Each L. I. U. player accounted for a goal and Hilthouse made three as the Blackbirds jumped into a 14-0 advantage after 6 minutes.

Schmarr interrupted with a goal under the basket, but Hilthouse came back with a three-point play. Then Zeke Brown, Schmarr and Tony Ambrose countered rapidly to cut the score to 17-8. A minute laetr Adamaitis recorded the final Red and Black goal before the L. I. U. began its 15-point rally. Substitute Myron Sewitch made eight of these tallies in these last 5 minutes of play.

Sid Silas to Fight Arcelli on Monday

Sid Silas will return to the local wars next Monday night at Turner's Arena in a cofeatured eight-rounder against Wether Arcelli, of Boston.

Silas knocked out Charley Thompson in Baltimore recently, won from Eddie Guerra here, and just last Monday night scored a second-round knockout over Lou Raymond, in Baltimore. The Raymond knockout is being investigated by the Maryland Boxing Commission as many of the spectators failed to see the wallop which felled Louis.

Massanutten Victor Over Central

Cadets Win, 39-35, After Running Up Lead of 22-14 at Half.

For the second half of its game with Massanutten Military Academy yesterday, Central outpointed the Cadets but they still pay off on both halves which ended with Massanutten winning, 39-35 on the Central court. The Cadets, heavily favored to win the Virginia prep school title, took a 22-14 lead in the first half.

Van Hyning, flashy forward of the visitors was a major thorn in the side of the Central shotmakers, rolling up 17 points, including six baskets. Sam Fox, finding his free-shot eye good, led Central's scoring with nine points.

Central never led nor came closer than four points to tying the score. It was Massanutten's second win over Central, having nosed out the locals, 44-42 in an extra-period game at Massanutten a few weeks ago.

Case of Jack Dempsey's Chauffeur All Untangled

Salt Lake City, Feb. 16 (AP).—The Dempseys were getting straightened out today over the case of Theodore Roosevelt Dockery.

Dockery, despite protestations he was Jack Dempsey's chauffeur, was arrested Sunday night. Police said he was accused of stealing clothing from the former heavyweight champion's father, Hyrum. No formal charge was forthcoming, however, and he was released. Today police said Jack Dempsey had sent Dockery funds to join Jack in Florida.

Tigers Shift 2 Games.

Hampden-Sydney, Va., Feb. 16 (AP).—Hampden-Sydney College announced today a scheduled basketball game between the Tigers and University of Richmond here February 26 had been moved up to Thursday night.

A game with Lynchburg originally scheduled for Thursday has been shifted to Saturday afternoon.

Sunday Bowling Here Is Aim of House Bill

Bowling alley operators in the District viewed with a high degree of expectancy a joint resolution to remove the ban on Sunday bowling, introduced late yesterday by Representative Dewey Short (Republican), Missouri, a member of the House District Committee. The bill provides that all licensed alleys in the District of Columbia must remain closed from midnight Saturday until 2 p. m. Sunday. It would permit all pin establishments to begin operations Sunday afternoons at 2 o'clock.

Passing of the bill would mark the termination of the local alley operators' fight for more bowling hours and increased revenue, arguing that heretofore the tremendous operating expenses all the year round failed to offset the regular season of activity, which is considered approximately five months.

The bill was introduced two years ago at the conclusion of the seventy-third Congress. It was defeated then due to the fact it was tacked on as a rider to the race bill.

Heretofore the attention of local pinmen has been attracted to neighboring cities, Baltimore, Md., Richmond, Va., and Silver Spring, Md. drawing practically all of the Capital's Sunday trade. Sunday bowling in the District would virtually make Washington the duckpin center of the South, enabling the local stars to match their skill against the Nation's foremost pinmen in special match competition. Sunday bowling would be the ideal spot for exhibitions of this sort.

Wiffy Cox Gets Initial Ace of 29-Year Career

WIFFY COX.

Cox fired a two-iron shot across the water on the 215-yard twelfth hole, watched the ball hit the edge of the green and roll into the cup. It was the second ace scored on the hole since the course was constructed in 1927.

Playing with Ralph Duhldahl, of St. Louis, and Roof Gilson, of Geneva, Ohio, he carded an outgoing 32, three under par, and came home in 34, two below. The course record was held jointly by Harry Cooper, of Chicago, and Ted Turner, of Pine Valley, N. J.

Favorites Beaten In St. Augustine

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 16 (AP).—The tournament favorite and his comedalist were eliminated from the St. Augustine golf tournament today in first round upsets.

Carl Dann, jr., of Orlando, Fla., who holds two legs on the Walter J. Travis Memorial Trophy, and was favored to win permanent possession this year, was defeated by an unknown, C. Dudley Ward, of Rochester, N. Y., 2 and 1.

Dann and William Holt, jr., of Syracuse, N. Y., shared the medal position with cards of 71 in the qualifying round. Holt lost to James Sweeney, St. Augustine, 1 up.

Frank Allan, Pittston, Pa., won, 3 and 2, over Pierce Harris, Columbus, Ohio.

Giants Launch '37 Training Season

Brannick, Club Secretary, Vanishes in Direction of Cuba to Pave Way.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 16.—The 1937 major league training season officially started today when Secretary Edward Aloysius McGonigle Brannick, of the New York Giants, disappeared in the general direction of Havana, Cuba.

Snow was in the air when Brannick, equipped with a Spanish dictionary, 15 pounds of his favorite coffee, and his pretty wife, boarded the train. The rest of the New York party will sail tomorrow.

"We didn't have a single holdout," Brannick rejoiced. "Joe Moore, Dick Bartell, Harry Danning, Hank Leiber and Roy Spencer haven't sent in their contracts yet, but they'll be in Havana by Friday." Shortstop Bartell arrived in Havana today.

According to Eddie, the boys mis-

Western Five Loses Upset By 26-25

By John R. Vosburgh.

Eastern High lurched to within one short step of its fourth straight inter-high basketball championship yesterday when it snatched a 34-30 victory from Roosevelt in three over-time periods while Tech was upsetting Western, 26-25. Only Tech, which plays Eastern on Tuesday, stands between the champs and another title.

The Tech upset of Western occurred in the Roosevelt gymnasium at the same time Coach Mike Kelley, of Eastern, was gambling on substitutes to halt Roosevelt in the Tech gymnasium. Baskets by Substitutes Bill Palmer and "Soup" Hancock finally brought the marathon melee to a joyous finish for the Lincoln Parkers.

The vigorous Mr. Kelley, who says he pulls his substitutes out of a hat, certainly pulled two plums out of his Stetson in Palmer and Hancock. At the close of the regular game time, the count was tied at 27-27 after Eastern had led, 22-17, going into the final quarter.

Lombardy Is Star.

Russ Lombardy, blond bomber of the champs, whose 15 points and great guarding of Frank Bailey, Roosevelt ace, led the Northeast marksmen to their triumph, sank a long shot in the first overtime period but Capt. Joe Comer, of Roosevelt, tied the situation at 29-29 when he took a tap from Bailey and dribbled half the length of the floor to score with 15 seconds to play.

Nobody scored in the second added session. Comer made a great block of a shot by Lee Lusby when the Easterner appeared sure to score after a fast dribble to the basket and Lombardy, Carroll Colton and Clint Quantrille all missed shots directly under the basket while the hundreds of Roosevelt rooters rocked in suspense.

Exasperated at the failure of his regulars to score, Coach Kelley began banking on his substitutes in the third extra period. Palmer, playing in a uniform whose white pants didn't match the others, covered himself with glory by sinking the shot which broke the tie, a 20-foot pot shot from an oblique angle. Hancock followed this with one from the side out of a hot scrimmage to make the count 33-29, but missed a foul shot in the next breath.

Lombardy lengthened the lead to 34-29 on a free shot as an over-anxious Rough Rider fouled him and the foul shot which Irving Fogel sank for Roosevelt just before the finish was an anti-climax which sent the Roosevelt students filing out of the gym in lugubrious dejection.

Most costly play of the game occurred when Roosevelt led, 27-26. The diminutive Colton drew a foul from the overanxious Fogel with a minute to play as he wheeled away from the Rough Rider far from scoring territory. Quickly he shot his free toss and the game was tied. With seconds to go, Comer missed a shot from the side and Colton tried a long one, also wide by a good margin just before the normal playing time ended.

Burly Ray Fridrich, whose 11 points led the Roosevelt scoring, kept the Orange in the running in the first half, which ended with the count 12 to 12. Nine of the 12 were scored by Fridrich, including three baskets from melees under the back board.

Lombardy piled up 6 points in a row in the third period to lead Eastern's rally to a 22-to-16 lead. Chick Colley, big Eastern guard, had taken to the sidelines in the first period with an injured ankle.

Almost equally heart thumping was the Western-Tech embroglio. Unlike Eastern, however, Tech led virtually from the start. The only

Light Moment Comes Out of Retirement to Win Hialeah Sprint

10-to-1 Shot Ridden by Le Blanc

Conservative Is Second, Beaten Half Length; Sir Isaac Wins.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 16.—Light Moment, making her first start in almost a year, came back to the races in great form and won the featured Princess Doreen Purse, a 6-furlong dash for 3-year-old fillies, here today. The victory of the daughter of Sting, at odds of 10 to 1, was a tribute to the conditioning ability of Mary Hirsch, who trains the filly for Mrs. Parker Corning. Light Moment had not been to the post since April, 1936, when she ran for $1,500 in a Jamaica claiming affair and finished second.

The place went to W. W. Adams' Conservative, a half-length behind in the hard drive to the wire. Mrs. F. P. Magann's Golden Thought was third, a length and a half farther back. H. W. Jackson's Glamorous, favorite in the eight-horse field, showed no speed at any stage of the race and beat one horse. Showers fell earlier in the afternoon, but it was clearing as the feature was decided and the racing strip was fast. The time was 1:11 4-5.

Hubert Le Blanc did a splendid job of guiding Light Moment to her surprising score. Under a mere 102 pounds, the bearer of the yellow and green silks dashed into command in the first furlong, quickly passing Suncrax, which was placed outside the stalls and outbroke the field. Taking two lengths' advantage over Conservative, Light Moment held her ground although tiring in the stretch. She had to be hard urged, but responded with all she had in the closing strides.

Maiden 3-year-olds supplied the action in the 6-furlong opening event. Sir Isaac, a $27.90 for $2 shot, closed very easy to make the grade by a head under Apprentice Albert Schmidl. The well-played Dark Sun was second, two lengths before Sister Fan. War Rumor and Dark Sun had the pace between them into the final furlong. Then Sir Isaac, gaining with every stride on the outside, shot up in the nick of time to win going away. The victor needed 1:13 3-5 to complete the trip.

Scotish Mary Winner.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's famous pink and black banner was borne to a hollow victory by Scottish Mary in the second race, another dash for maiden 3-year-olds. Hustled away from the gate by Apprentice Jaekle, the daughter of St. Brideaux, sprinted into a long lead and never faltered. She won by five lengths and returned $7.50. Manrico, one of the oustiders, kept up with the leaders and closed gamely to land the place by a half length over the highly fancied Uncle Lester. The latter tired trying to catch the winner. It began to rain before this event but the track was fast for the running.

Idle Along, a 6-year-old mare that attracted very little attention in the wagering, sprang a major surprise in the third race of 1 mile. Giving Apprentice Jaekle two in a row, the elderly daughter of Happy Argo scored in a camera duel with Peedeeque and paid $57.70 for $2. Peedeeque had a length margin over Mystic Sign. The latter and the favored Kerry Patch used themselves up battling for the lead. Mystic Sign seemed a winner after disposing of Kerry Patch but he suddenly wilted in the last furlong as Idle Along and Peedeeque charged up to settle the issue.

H. W. Jackson's Wise Mentor, a well-backed starter in the recent Nursery Stakes No. 1, but badly beaten after a rough journey, came back to take a hard-earned victory in the 3-furlong fourth event, for juveniles. J. H. Whitney's Family Friend, fourth in the Nursery, missed the purse by a head while beating Co-Sport by four lengths for second money. Gert B., the favorite, never could get up. Family Friend led Wise Mentor into the last sixteenth, where the Wise Counsellor colt wore his rival down, to return $6.30. Wise Mentor finished in 0:33 3-5.

Maid of Arches, ridden by the unfashionable apprentice, A. Clutter, made a runaway of the sixth race, first split of the divided turf course event. Breaking very fast from an inside position, the chestnut mare immediately drew away from the field and, increasing her lead at every pole, won galloping by eight lengths. She was the first successful favorite, returning $7.20. Vested Power provided what contention there was most of the trip and took second money by a length. Kindred Spirit was third.

Gerald Annexes Santa Anita Test

Los Angeles, Feb. 16 (AP).—Gerald, Mrs. W. H. Furst's candidate for the $50,000 added Santa Anita Derby, won the $1,500 added Derby Trial today, with Clingendaal second and Papenie third.

Jockey Basil James, chalking up a double victory for the day, booted Gerald into the front in a driving finish down the stretch.

Gerald, running in Santa Anita's annual "prep" race for the $50,000 Derby, which will be held next Monday, was timed at 1:39 2-5 for the mile journey over a slow track.

The Derby Trial, originally slated to have been run in two divisions, was cut to one when "off going" brought on many scratches.

Gerald, at one time an 8 to 1 shot on the board, paid $9.40.

Glingendaal and Papenie set the pace, with Gerald moving from fourth to replace Calculator as they turned for home. Gerald passed the two leaders in the stretch, winning by two lengths.

Citadel's Unbeaten Boxers to Give Columbus Battle Tonight

Cadets Boast 2 Knockout Specialists

Schlaifer, Lazear Draw Visitors' Toughest in Arena Bouts.

Columbus University's undefeated leather-pushers will be seeking their third victory of the season tonight when they climb through the ropes at Turner's Arena to trade punches with the fighting cadets from the Citadel, of Charleston, S. C., but they aren't at all certain of achieving their purpose. The first bout is scheduled for 8:30 o'clock.

The Citadel is not to be regarded as a weak sister in the beak-busting business, for it comes to town undefeated after three blistering debates with Georgia, South Carolina and Tennessee, and with a couple of kayo artists who promise to give Columbus a dose of its own medicine. The squad is en route to West Point, where it meets Army Saturday afternoon.

The weights have been shifted slightly to accommodate both teams, and consequently there will be a semi-senior welterweight bout at 150 pounds as a substitute for the usual 165-pound duel. The opponents will be Bobby Rawson, of Columbus, and Pete Lempesis.

Schlaifer in for Battle.

In the 155-pound class, Dave Schlaifer, one of the more bruising of the Barristers, faces Carlos Townsend, who is reported to be a miniature Firpo. Carlos is a terrific puncher and loves to mix it, as he adequately demonstrated last week by knocking his opponent out of the ring twice, and out for good finally. Schlaifer belted out Frank Burruto, of King, in impressive fashion last week, and if even close to usual form should give his rival a stiff tussle.

Another who is in for a rough session if advance reports are correct, is Buddy Lazear, Columbus' hard-hitting welter, who will do his stuff under the handicap of being in the same ring with Ripper Todd, reputedly the toughest hombre in Citadel's line-up. Todd is undefeated, and intends to remain so, Lazear or no Lazear.

Columbus will be bolstered by the re-appearance of Bob Grimm, who is returning to action after a brief lay-off occasioned by a touch of flu, but it is going into action one down to its guests, for the heavyweight bout again will be forfeited.

The line-ups:

145 pounds, Buddy Lazear (C. U.) vs. "Ripper" Todd (C.).
150 pounds, Bobby Rawson (C. U.) vs. Pete Lempesis (C.).
155 pounds, Dave Schlaifer (C. U.) vs. Carlos Townsend (C.).

Giants Officially Launch '37 Season said their contracts, or are too busy to send them in. "I don't know exactly what the reason is, but they're not yelling for more money," he crowed.

Only casualty on the Giants' list is Manager Bill Terry. He has a cold down in Memphis and won't be along for another week. In his absence, Head Coach Frank Snyder will be in charge.

Even Col. Jacob Ruppert, New York Yankees' owner, was in better spirits today. As long as the conversation didn't drift round to "Legs" Gehrig, the good colonel was calm.

"I had a letter from Jake Powell," he announced, "and he's going to be all right. He says he wants to play for the Yankees and nobody else, and that he's changed his mind about that $14,000 demand. We should get together in a couple of days."

Woodward Prep Downs Friends Five, 15 to 14

In a seesaw basketball game, Woodward Prep took a 15-14 decision from Friends School yesterday on the Friends court. The home team took a 7-5 lead in the first quarter, but Woodward, led by Docey, center, staged a rally which had the score in Woodward's favor as the final period opened. Friends led, 9-7, at the half, but trailed, 11-9, as the third quarter ended.

Final Two Bouts in Terp-Card Meet Loom as Real Grudge Tilts

JOHNNY GORMLEY.

A couple of old-fashioned grudge fights with all the trimmings that should appease the most bloodthirsty ring fans, will climax Saturday night's fistic fireworks between Catholic University and Maryland at College Park, and a more fitting finale for the season's biggest indoor collegiate attraction could not be purchased for love nor money. The bouts have to be only half as good as expected to satisfy the patrons, and on paper they promise to be even better than last year's.

Johnny Gormley and "Turk" Birkland, of Maryland, and Freddie Rogers and Leo Katalinas, of Catholic, are the principals. The mere mention of either names on the rival campuses is quite sufficient to incite rioting. It's about as safe as tossing a lighted match into a keg of dynamite, perhaps not quite as safe. Indeed, the bouts almost caused a free-for-all in Catholic's gym last winter.

Gormley and Rogers, who fought under his real name of Rydzewski, participated in the light-heavyweight bout, while Katalinas met Birkland in the heavyweight struggle, and Catholic's representatives triumphed in both. But not as easily as that. The abrupt, fantastic ending of the first almost caused a riot, and the bloody, bitter ending of the second left a bad taste in the mouths of all concerned, particularly Birkland. He was knocked out.

Dubious Goings On.

Maryland, particularly Gormley, will never forget the finish of the light-heavyweight encounter. It wasn't a particularly fast bout, although excitement was at a high C pitch, for Rogers was relying almost wholly on his vaunted left jab, and Gormley was plugging away ineffectively with a fair right hand. Honors were about even.

A series of split second developments early in the third round changed the entire complexion of matters, however, brought the mob howling to its feet and almost resulted in serious disorders. Gormley caught Rogers with a right, and the latter stepped back in with a left jab and a short right that caught the Terrapin flush on the jaw. He went down for a count of one, and as he came up he outstretched both gloves to Referee Charley Reynolds to be cleaned of resin.

Rogers, who disobeyed orders to retire to a neutral corner was only an arms-length away and he saw a golden opportunity to end matters. He did, too, with a terrific right that whizzed over Reynolds' shoulder and caught the unsuspecting Gormley flush on the jaw. He crumpled to the canvas out cold.

Another Brawl, Maybe.

The Katalinas-Birkland brawl was just that, and it did nothing to calm the audience's jumpy nerves, for both boys stood toe-to-toe and blazed away with everything at their command. Birkland came out of his corner with instructions to box the clumsier Katalinas, and did for a brief period. Katalinas was a ridiculously easy target, and it is only fair to presume that Birkland figured that one good punch to the proper portion of his anatomy would end the proceedings.

He instictively stepped in and hit the Cardinal heavy with a one-two to the head, stepped back and waited for him to drop. Katalinas only blinked, and then moved forward. He backed Birkland into his own corner and plied him with uncountable rights to the head, sending him to the canvas. Birkland was up and down as much as The Post's elevator in the first round, his face a gory mask, but his courage unstinted.

He was reminded of the previous instructions between rounds, but promptly forgot them when the second round bell clanged, and was just as promptly belted to the canvas. A towel from his corner ended further hostilities.

Comeback of Old Kismet, Jump Pair Top at Ft. Myer

A 100 per cent performance by a pair of jumpers, a thrilling jump-off victory in the touch-and-out handicap and the successful return to the show ring of 30-year old Kismet provided the highlights of the third indoor horse show at Fort Myer last night.

Lieut. Frank Henry on Clipped Wings and Lieut. Joseph Gahnal piloting Eye's Delight turned in the perfect performance as they manipulated their mounts over a tricky course without a fault.

The handicap touch-and-out was won by the plucky little Smoky, owned and ridden by Maj. Frank Whittaker, in a jump-off in the higher handicaps. Smoky shot over 17 obstacles, faltering only on the last, to clearly establish supremacy in this class.

Sentimentally, at least, the return of Kismet dominated the show. Just a few weeks ago, Kismet had a stroke. Veterinarians gave up all hope of saving the life of the campaigner which still holds the world's record for the broad high jump.

Fate had other things in store for Kismet, however, and before many days the veteran was up and about. The veterinarians said exercise was in order to keep the old horse's heart from growing fatty. Kismet was turned out to pasture, and low and behold, one day Fritz Kleeman, the owner and riding instructor at Arlington Hall, found the old campaigner taking the jumps at the school—without a rider.

Kismet was entered in the student jumping class and a jump-off was in order between him and Royal Barton, also from Arlington Hall. Three times did these two horses jump off before Kismet finally subdued the 6-year-old youngster to win the class.

The results:

HANDICAP TOUCH AND OUT—Won by Smoky (Maj. Frank L. Whittaker); second, Inclusive (Lieut. J. R. Pugh); third, John Bass (Lieut. T. J. H. Trapnell); fourth, Eye's Delight (Lieut. J. Grahnal).

Miss Sabean Stars As Shamrocks Win

Florence Sabean bagged the individual laurels in the Washington Ladies League last night at Arcadia, clouting the maples for a big game of 142 to give the Shamrock girls their only win from the Columbians. Catherine Quigley costarred for honors with a big set of 350. The El Gees continued to set the pace by stopping the Nomads twice and the Columbians held runner-up honors with an odd-game decision over the Shamrocks.

During the league's activities, free entries were given to the Lorraine Gulli Sweepstakes which are scheduled for Saturday at the Convention Hall alleys. Mrs. Quigley's 350 entitled her to a free shot at the stakes and Edith Orpin was the recipient of the other free try with a 333 total.

Al Keller went on the warpath in the Lutheran Church (Mens) League, chalking up two new season record marks with a 164 game and 425 set . . . Matty Jett, Premier Cab Association team ace, topped the shooters in the Columbia Heights League with a 162 effort . . . Two interleague sweepstakes are on tap for the Lucky Strike Saturday, the 26-team Income Tax Internal Revenue Laegue rolling a handicap affair and the National Capital League holding a full handicap event.

Gonzaga Seeks Cadets' Scalp Friday

St. John's Lost Last Game in Overtime, 25-21, Purple Eastern Play Today.

The bitter Gonzaga-St. John's basketball rivalry breaks out in full fury again Friday night when the two Catholic schools collide on the Catholic University court at 8 o'clock. It will be their second meeting of the year and their first at the university since Gonzaga spilled the cadets, 25-21, in an overtime tilt a few weeks ago.

On that occasion, 2,500 spectators cramming the gymnasium to capacity, were afforded one of the most brilliant spectacles of the local schoolboy season. Both St. John's and Gonzaga are stronger this season than they have been for years and, between the two of them, they have lowered the colors of the city's most highly regarded public school teams.

Coach Irving (Horse) Holbrook, of St. John's, a bit disappointed at allowing the first game to slip out of his grasp, has groomed his team to a fighting pitch. With such aces available as Jimmy Giebel, Johnny Swagart, Ace Reges, Joe Gallagher and Francis Battiste, St. John's threws a highly experienced squad into action.

On the other hand, Gonzaga has its own stars of stand-out quality. Such able point producers as Chip Collins, Jim Walsh and Jim Boyle have been a menace to Gonzaga's opposition all season and with Boyle finally hitting his true scoring stride, the Purple passers have appeared well-nigh invincible.

Gonzaga was forced to cancel its important game yesterday with Episcopal because of a mumps epidemic at the Alexandria school. Today, however, the leaders of the Catholic League face Eastern's interhigh champions on the Gonzaga court at 3:30 p. m. Gonzaga defeated Eastern in their first meeting this season.

Post Cage Play Lures Army Of Stars

Entry of St. Martin's Five Would Produce Battle of Ex-School Aces.

The District A. A. U. basketball tournament, starting March 1, under the jurisdiction of The Post, is luring an army of other high school stars of past years, in addition to the Eastern championship team of 1935 and 1936—Dean, Edelin, Hellidge, Shaner and Buckholtz.

Possibility of a bitter struggle between star grads of Tech and Eastern is looming, for in the offing has appeared the powerful St. Martin's unlimited five, composed almost exclusively of Tech aces of the past. The Saints are tied for first place in the fast Tri-County League at Laurel, Md., with ten wins and two losses.

For years, the St. Martin's Boys Club has produced powerful teams and one of the most powerful was that of six or seven years ago. Many of those playing then are the same as now carrying the standard of St. Martin's Holy Name Society.

Particularly outstanding are Francis (Red) Daly, all-high at Tech, and Billy Doyle, of Gonzaga, unanimous all-prep selection. Other Tech stand-outs of the past bedeck the line-up, including Jimmy Roland, Bobby Wilson, Lloyd Hahn, Andy Farrell and Spike McGahey.

Many Other Stars.

A string of 21 games has kept the Saints busy this season but they did their work so well that they lost only two of them. Both defeats were in league competition. Incidentally, the Saints are seeking games with teams having gymnasiums and may book them by calling Eddie Farrell, North 6042-J.

In addition to St. Martin's, other teams with high school stars are gunning for the unlimited title held by the George Washington freshmen. Don Fones, Central's All-High forward of last season, is the big gun for Federal WPA, considered a worthy twin team of the District WPA.

Jimmy Thompson, the former Duke University ace, promises to be a conspicuous figure in the tournament if for no other reason than his high-scoring propensities. Averaging 10 points per game, Thompson is the big gun of Federal Bureau of Investigation. The former Duke is considered by many Washington's ranking individual star in nonprofessional basketball.

Other well-known names make up the Investigation line-up, such as Beth Bethel, Joe Robinson, Herbie Thompson and Bernie Jones.

Tournament officials reminded teams contemplating entry that only eight more days remain in which to enter the tournament. Blanks may be obtained at The Post sports department, various boys clubs and the Heurich Gymnasium, but must be filed at the Boys Club of Washington on or before February 24, a week from today.

Hoyas, Old Line Resume Feud Saturday

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Crowded into the background by the impending match between the ring teams of Catholic University and Maryland, Georgetown's basketball game with the Old Liners, which will usher in the season's biggest and most important double-header, promises to match, if not exceed, the boxing in thrills and excitement.

Maryland overcame a 22-to-9 deficit to win a thrilling 47-to-39 victory last year at Tech High School, and the year before Georgetown squeezed out a 26-to-25 victory in the last few seconds of play, when Sis Esenstadt dropped in a foul shot at College Park. Both games had the customers on their feet throughout, so fast was the action, so keen the competition.

Those who saw the first contest two years ago, which marked the resumption of athletic relations between the schools, cannot quickly forget the terrific pace. There was one stage when Referee Paul Menton lost control of the situation and almost burst a blood vessel trying to halt play. The thundering din of the capacity crowd completely drowned his whistle, and the players were so wrapped up in the game none saw him wildly gesticulating in an effort to stop play.

As Good This Time.

Menton finally gave up, walked over to the timekeeper and instructed him to stop the watch. He waited fully 30 seconds before a basket was made, and when the teams lined up for the succeeding tap-off calmly informed the players of a foul committed fully a minute and a half before.

This year's game promises to exceed both of its predecessors in all departments, for the teams are more evenly matched than in both previous games. Georgetown will rule a favorite, but a slight one, and pre-game odds in a case of this caliber mean absolutely nothing.

The Hoyas' victims include New York University, Princeton, Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Temple, West Virginia and Army, all outstanding combinations. Coach Freddy Mesmer has a wealth of seasoned talent at his command in "Big Mike" Petroskey, Tom Nolan, Don Gibeau, Hank Bertrand, Ed Kurtyka, Harry Bassin and others. Carroll Shore will be missing, however, and his absence will be a serious handicap. Georgetown, in a word, is well prepared for action.

Terps Not the Best.

Maryland's record is not bright, for the Terps' old foes, Duke, North Carolina and Washington and Lee, among others, have taken them into camp by comfortable margins, but the fact remains that Maryland is still a good quintet and must be reckoned with.

Coach Burt Shipley's best bets are Charley Keller, Al Waters, "Little Knocky" Thomas, Ben Allen, Bill Guckeyson, Waverly Wheeler and Johnny McCarthy, all seasoned campaigners. Most of them earned their spurs in local high school uniforms.

Both teams have unusually hard games just before their own private party. Maryland tangles with Washington and Lee tomorrow night at College Park, and Georgetown faces Carnegie Tech Friday at Tech High School. Both, undoubtedly, will feel the strain of these contests. But the undergraduates and supporters of the two rivals do not think so. To them these games merely will be warm-ups for Saturday's big affair.

G. W. Freshmen Stop Y. M. C. A. Five, 36-35

George Washington's freshmen quintet, rated a dark horse in the forthcoming A. A. U. tournament, disposed of a keen rival by the narrow margin of 36-35 last night. Karp led the eventual winners, registering eight field goals and a foul for 17 points. Goslin was outstanding for the "Y."

Medalist, Other Stars Beaten in Golf Upsets

By the Associated Press.

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 16.—A day of upsets in the women's golf tournament today saw Kathryn Hemphill, the Carolina comet, and Mrs Leon Solomon, of Memphis, the medalist, eliminated in the first round and Patty Berg, of Minneapolis extended to win.

Grace Amory, of Palm Beach, threw a scare into red-haired Patty by winning four of the first five holes, but the diminutive Minneapolis star trimmed the deficit to one at the turn and fired under-par golf on the back nine, winning 2 and 1.

Patty Berg took three to sink her ball from just off the green on first hole, sliced her drive into trouble on No. 3, three-putted on No. 4 and dubbed an iron shot on the fifth. She steadied to score two pars and two birdies for the remainder of the nine and continued on the backstretch, closing the match with a birdie 2 after an iron shot 3 feet from the pin.

A thriller of the recent Miami Biltmore tournament in which Miss Hemphill defeated Audrey Phipps, of Palm Beach, 1 up was re-enacted today with the result reversed.

In other matches Jane Cothran, of FGreenville, S. C., ushered out Mrs. Solomon, 2 and 1; Mrs. Freeda Nolan, Newcastle, Pa., eliminated Betty Botterhill, Salt Lake City, 3 and 1; Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., beat Mrs. Helen Hockenjos, Lake Hopatcong, N. J., 4 and 3; Dorothy Traung, San Francisco, won over Virginia Guilfoil, Syracuse, N. Y., 5 and 4, and Helen Dettweiler, Washington, trounced Mrs. H. D. Sterrett, Hutchison, Kans., 4 and 3.

Miss Hemphill took an early 2-up lead, but it faded before her 8 on the 517-yard eleventh and a birdie later by Miss Phipps. The Carolina champion took a lead again on the thirteenth when Miss Phipps got into trouble, but lost three of the next four holes to as many birdies by Miss Phipps. They halved the final hole with bogey 5s.

Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., runer up to Patty in the Biltmore, will meet her again tomorrow in the quarter-finals. She advanced today with a 3-and-2 victory over Goldie Bateson, of Milwaukee.

Wilson High Swamps St. Alban's Five, 37-15

Woodrow Wilson High bounced back into the win column yesterday in impressive form, swamping St. Alban's School, 37-15 on the American University court.

Coach Carl Heintell apparently has found his much needed individual scoring specialist in Bob Haycock, for the forward piled up nine points. Joe Brooks also accounted for nine markers. Wilson led at half time, 19-8.

Louis Is Choice Over Brown Tonight

D. C. Fighter Is Confident He'll Stay—But No One Else Feels Same Way.

where a decision is a moral defeat. He has earned a reputation as a bomber, and a bomber he must be to remain in the spotlight.

The Brown faction, however, points out that Brown is signed by Mike Jacobs, and that the Washington Hebrew has as much to gain as Louis through a victory.

Brown completed his training today and expects to weigh in tomorrow noon between 195 and 200 pounds. Louis worked out in Chicago today and was scheduled to arrive tomorrow morning.

Brown's confidence is bolstered because he stayed the full 10 rounds in their previous meeting despite the fact he was in a fog from the first to the eighth round. He started out to reach Louis with three straight lefts, which was a mistake. He should have used a telephone. Louis connected with left and right and nearly ended the fight right there.

Brown Has Chance.

Billy McCarney, Brown's veteran manager, says the same error will not be made again. He declares Louis wins his fights in the first round, if not by knockouts by softening up his opponents for an easy kill later. If Brown can outmaneuver the Bomber early in the battle, the Washington boy has a great chance, McCarney says.

The bout is scheduled to start at 10:05 p. m. (C. S. T.) and will be broadcast over the N. B. C. blue network.

Walter Bates, veteran Kansas City referee, will be the third man in the ring. Two judges will be named tomorrow by Garrett L. Smalley, chairman of the Missouri athletic commission.

Brown will be seconded by Louie Newman, of Detroit; Jim McNamara, Brown's trainer, and McCarney. The Louis triumvirate of Jack Blackburn, John Roxborough and Julian Black will be in the Bomber's corner.

Missouri has the no-foul rule, so the only out is a knockout for the man who fails to last.

Streaks Play 'Y.'

The Calvert Blue Streaks will play the Y. M. C. A. Ravens tomorrow at 4 p. m. on the Y. M. C. A. court.

Copper at 14c Highest Price In Seven Years

Export Prices Also Rise With Increasing Demand Abroad.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 16.—The price of domestic copper was raise dby principal producers today to 14 cents a pound, the highest since April, 1930. Export copper sold at 13.875 cents a pound, also a 7-year peak. The new price of the domestic metal represents an advance of one cent over the level in effect for several weeks.

Copper at 14 cents a pound, has risen nearly 5 cents since January, 1936. In the last five months the quotation has increased from 9.50 cents a pound, setting many of the so-called marginal mines into production after a lapse of years.

Advance in the export quotation followed the surprise announcement that European stocks of the refined metal had decreased during January. Many in the trade had expected an increase because of heightened production.

Virtually all the recent domestic price advances have been forced by the bull market abroad, where armaments requirements vied with expanding industry and speculative buying in forcing constantly higher quotations.

Sugar Consumption Trebles in 50 Years

New York, Feb. 16.—Sugar consumption in the United States during the last 50 years has increased from 1,450,716 long tons to 5,988,010 tons, or 312 per cent, according to Lamborn & Co.

While sugar consumption in the United States has risen over 300 per cent, population, which has grown from 57,937,540 in 1886 to 128,429,000 in 1936, reflects an increase of only 122 per cent.

Slump Abroad Reduces Price Of Wheat Here

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—Nearly 3 cents a bushel unexpected Liverpool market tumble led to decided setbacks of Chicago wheat values today, especially May, representing wheat already in bins. Big arrivals of Argentine wheat in Great Britain, together with quantities of unsold Canadian wheat also being received there, and prospective heavy receipts too from Australia, were reported as largely responsible. In addition, cables told of at least a temporary letup in European continental demand for wheat.

World Copper Supply Increases in January

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—With an increase abroad offsetting a decline in this country, trade circles reported today a net January gain of 330 tons in world stocks of refined and blister copper.

The increase was attributed to expansion in foreign output following the recent rise in prices and upward revision of production quotas of mines abroad.

Stock Prices Edge Higher; Led by Demand for Coppers

Utility Shares in Demand Near Close; Oil Issues in Favor; Rails Indifferent; Bonds Lower; Wheat Declines.

By Frederick Gardner.
Associated Press Financial Editor.

New York, Feb. 16.—The stock market climbed irregularly today. Price swings were erratic throughout the session. Copper issues whirled off to a brisk advance during the forenoon, stimulated by new recovery highs for the domestic and foreign metal.

Steels, after putting on a draggy performance during the morning, whittled down part of the early losses with the aid of what brokers described as short covering. In the late trading, however, as some sectors of the market were recovering demand for coppers abated and this group slid off from earlier peaks. Analysts were reluctant to place firm interpretations in the market's quick changes of pace and direction.

The action of the steels provided an example of the sudden shifts of Wall Street's frame of mind. At times, brokers said, these issues were depressed by profit selling prompted by the recent brisk rises. On other occasions they stiffened, presumably on demand from quarters hopeful over the outlook for further gains for heavy industry.

Rails were comparatively indifferent to Wall Street estimates of a better than seasonal increase in freight loadings in the near future. Oils had the benefit of an improved statistical position for the industry. Some utilities were in favor toward the close. Rubber issues got a fillip from the swing of General Motors Corporation back to the production line.

Chrysler was a high-stepper among the motors, running up about 3 points, and closing at 132½, up 2¼. General Motors was down ¾ to 68⅛.

Shares up fractions to around a point or more were Kennecott at 61¾, Anaconda, 56¾; Consolidated Edison, 44⅝; General Electric, 60¾; Illinois Central, 28; International Nickel, 65¼; International Telephone, 15; Sears Roebuck, 89⅞; Standard Oil of New Jersey, 73⅛; Goodrich, 42⅜; Case, 169, and Studebaker, 19⅛.

Down fractions to a point or more Montgomery Ward at 62½; American Telephone, 180¼; Bethlehem Steel, 87⅛; Radio, 11½; U. S. Steel, 105¾; International Harvester, 106; Republic Steel, 34⅝, and Socony Vacuum, 18⅞.

Measured by the Associated Press average of 60 shares the market was 0.1 of a point higher at 73.1. Transactions increased to 2,218,610 shares from 1,971,540 Monday.

Cotton closed 30 to 60 cents a bale lower. Wheat finished ½ to 2 cents a bushel lower and corn was unchanged down ⅞ of a cent. The pound sterling was up ¼ of a cent to $4.89¾ and French francs gained 3-16 of a cent to 4.66 cents.

Bonds Lower.

Selling pressure developed in the bond market today and while there was resistance in some divisions, especially among the second-grade rails, the list as a whole drifted narrowly lower.

Higher grade industrial and carrier issues were in little demand and declines of large fractions were recorded. Some of the industrial convertibles pushed forward for fair gains, but market in these was wholly selective.

Among the rails Great Northern 4s were off 1⅜@122⅜, Atlantic Coast line 4½s dropped 1⅛@95⅞, and Santa Fe 4s, at 110½, were off ¾. The New Haven issues were in contrast, the Convertible 6s adding 2¼@58¾ while the 3½ per cent debentures were 3¼ higher at 44. Gains of wide fractions were made by Erie 5s, 86¼. Illinois Central 4¾s, 77 and Rio Grande 4s, 34.

Steels proved soft spots among the industrials. Jones & Laughlin 4¼s, 34 were down 1⅛@103¼ and Youngstown Sheet & Tube Convertible 3½s lost 1½@132½.

Other losers included Symington-Gould 5s, with warrants which yielded 12⅛ at 175¼ on light volume. Higher were El Paso Gas 4¾s, up 5¼ at 162, and Studebaker convertible 6s, which gained 9¾ at 151¾.

United States Government loans suffered in the general decline, the Treasury 4s of 1944-54 dropping 11-32. Others in this section ranged as much as 7-32.

Foreign issues were quiet and narrow. French 7½s were off 2¾ at 119⅛, and fractional declines were chalked against some of the Argentine, Australian, Italian and Japanese loans. Norwegian, Belgian and Peruvian bonds gained a bit.

Indicating the extent of the decline in high-grade rails, the Associated Press average of 20 carriers dropped .2 of a point to 97.3, a new low for the year. Transactions totaled $15,056,000, face value, compared with $13,403,000 yesterday.

A. B. A. Studies Changed Bank Income Status

Commercial Loans Show Decline Compared With Investments.

New York, Feb. 16.—Changes in the earning powers of commercial banks and adjustments rendered necessary in their operating methods by altered relationships with business and Government are analyzed in a report by the American Bankers Association Economic Policy Commission made public here today.

The progressive shrinkage in the volume of commercial loans as compared with the investments of banks, the decrease in the part played by bank lendings in the business life of the Nation and the drop in the composite yield on bank earning assets are discussed. Leonard P. Ayers, chairman of the commission, in a foreword says:

"The data in this report seem to justify the conclusions that probably for a long time to come the proportion of commercial bank earning assets which will be invested in securities will continue much higher than before the depression and, while the volume of commercial loans will increase as business recovery advances, it seems unlikely that banks as a whole will soon be able to return to their old practice of having about half of their earning assets in commercial loans.

"The commission does not view these conditions with apprehension, but deems them important. They call for modifications in banking practices. The expenses of bank operation will need to be readjusted to the changed income producing power of earning assets. Also more attention should be devoted to the problems of the wise handling of investment accounts."

Kroger Sales Gain But Profit Declines

Cincinnati, Ohio, Feb. 16 (AP).—Albert H. Morrill, president of the Kroger Grocery & Baking Co., reported to stockholders today a $12,365,614 sales increase in 1936, but a smaller net profit than in 1935.

Profits for 1936 were $3,487,832 against $4,110,926 in 1935, but 1935 profits were increased by $467,451 in tax recoveries. Kroger was operating 4,212 stores at the end of the year, a decrease of 38 from 1935.

New Air Line Plans Pickup Service

Wheeling, W. Va., Feb. 16.—Ohio Valley Industrial Corporation announced today that definite plans exist for demonstration of a new air-mail and air-express pick-up and delivery system, thought to be of great national importance.

A demonstration plane, the "City of Wheeling," will probably operate from Somerset, Pa., into Pittsburgh and south to Wheeling, W. Va., serving intermediate points, starting this week. The Postoffice Department has not yet authorized the route to carry mail but private "express-parcels" will be picked-up and delivered at many points without the airplane landing.

Legislation is necessary to secure rights to transport mail matter. Within ten days a bill will be introduced in Congress in an attempt to secure Federal authorization and approval. A Federal subsidy will not be requested.

Business Spur Seen With End Of Auto Strike

Resumption of Productic Will Aid Supplying Industries.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 16.—Surv. ing the industrial picture as it w appear after General Motors swin into operation next week, busine analysts see a boost in the Nation income and employment. Althoug the strike affected only 20 of th company's 69 plants directly, othe were hit by a shortage of supplie and laid off men temporarily.

Many textile, rubber, glass, pain and accessory firms curtailed production because the giant motor-maker was forced to cancel orders. This meant reduced purchasing power for thousands of workers throughout the country, hence poorer business for the hundreds of retail shops serving them.

Ward's automobile production figures for the week ended February 6 showed General Motors' output has dropped to 200 units, compared with 22,500 in the same period a year ago.

Thus the strike reached its most effective point last week, virtually closing down the corporation's productive capacity.

With the resumption of operations in the next few days workers will again draw pay checks, orders will be placed, retailers will find their business on a more normal basis.

General Motors normally accounts for some 40 per cent of all automobiles turned out. Resumption will therefore greatly benefit the industry's biggest sources of raw materials.

It is the largest user of steel (25 per cent of the total), rubber (80 per cent), plate glass (75 per cent), nickel, lead and mohair. Copper, tin, cotton, leather and aluminum are also used in large amounts.

Although the strike cut sharply into the volume of cars produced, industrial activity as a whole was hurt but little. The Associated Press index of industrial activity, for example, was 98.9 last week, approximately 1 per cent under the average for the preceding six weeks and only 3 per cent below the 7-year high established during the first week of the year.

Eccles Urges US. Obligations To Back Notes

Reserve Bank Head Fears Deflation, He Testifies Before Committee.

By the Associated Press.

The House Banking Committee heard Marriner S. Eccles testify yesterday that the Federal Reserve System might be responsible for starting a "disastrously deflationary development" unless it were granted authority to use Government obligations as collateral security for Federal Reserve notes.

In the absence of that power, the governor of the Reserve Board said, the system might be compelled to adopt "a restrictive credit policy" leading to deflation.

The committee has under consideration a Senate-approved bill to extend the authority to June 30, 1939. It has scheduled further hearings for Thursday.

Eccles explained Federal Reserve notes must be backed now by at least 40 per cent gold and 60 per cent eligible paper and Government obligations. If the latter are not available, he said, 100 per cent gold backing is necessary.

"Is not this extension a sort of standby measure—a shotgun in the corner—to be used against a sudden withdrawal of foreign investments?" asked Representative Ford (Democrat), California.

"Yes, it is available for that purpose," the governor replied, "but it is more important for the present position because there is no eligible paper available."

The Reserve Board put up to stock exchanges yesterday the question of eliminating "in and out" trading but reserved the right to take official action if deemed necessary.

The board had considered amending a regulation to eliminate the three-day grace period within which customers buying securities on margin have been permitted to put up the margin.

2 Tire Firm Increase Pay of Office Workers

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Song recital by Kirsten Flagstad (Edwin McArthur, accompanist) in Constitution Hall Tuesday night. Program: "Seitdem dein Aug' in meines schaute," "Ach. Lieb' ich muss nun scheiden," "Schoen sind. doch kalt, die Himmelsterne," "Ich liebe dich" (Richard Strauss), "Mens jeg venter," "Lys Natt," "Dett gynger en baad" (Grieg), "Og se, hun kom," "Es naht der Herbst" (Jordan), "Und gestern hat er mir Rosen gebracht," "Hat dich die Liebe beruehrt" (Joseph Marx), "Nocturne" (Head), "Spendthrift" (Charles), "Love Went A-Riding" (Bridge), "Einsam in trueben Tagen" from "Lohengrin," "Du bist der Lenz" from "Die Walkuere" (Wagner).

It is by this time a commonplace to say that Kirsten Flagstad is one of the few great vocal artists of our day, and upon the demonstrable fact there is no need for expatiation. What remains to be emphasized is the basis of her artistry in simple and natural singing. The artifices and devices, the stress and the strain, the attitudes and emotional simulations with which lesser singers strive for greatness are foreign to her nature. Singing is for her a gift which she freely gives to others, not without a certain wonder that she should be admired for the manner of the giving.

The acclaim which has surged about her is, one surmises, more of an embarrassment to her than a source of vanity. She seems still to be slightly bewildered by the tumult and the shouting, as one whose inner peace is disturbed by thronging excitement. So perfect is the harmony between impulse and expression in her singing that she does not understand why it should be considered extraordinary.

The salient aspect of her singing is the spontaneous flow of tone sustained on a free and unforced breathing. The cadence of the phrases has an unbroken line, the smoothness of the melos is unperturbed, and the full tones swell to open resonance as naturally as a flower unfolds. Even when she exerts deliberate pressure, as she did in the electrifying "Ho-Jo-To-Ho" of Bruennhilde in the last encore, the tone has a flawless rondure.

One could hear Mme. Flagstad in any number of lieder recitals with unfailing delight. The songs come from her throat with such instant inspiration they seem to be improvisations. Each song is felt as an emotional unit, and not as a product of conscious imitation of emotion. Hers is native singing, fresh and ebullient, springing from the instinct to sing.

What her repertoire must be one can only judge from her choice of the four songs by Richard Strauss. Most singers seem unaware that Strauss wrote more than a half-dozen lyrics, but Mme. Flagstad brought us lovely ones that are seldom heard, and it would not be surprising to find that she knows a score more of them. The Grieg songs were never disclosed more beautifully.

Youth Questioned In Linhart Death

Kansas City, Feb. 16 (AP).—The mysterious apartment house slaying of a railroad traveling agent, Gayland W. Linhart, 33, who lived alone but had many visitors, drew a strange story today.

Linhardt's collection of guns and a recent experience with robbers were other angles studied.

Pay Rise Opposed For Bureau Heads

By the Associated Press.

A joint Congressional committee studying President Roosevelt's plan for Government reorganization decided yesterday to eliminate a proposed increase in salaries of bureau and department heads.

The decision developed during a conference between the Congressional group and the committee headed by Louis Brownlow.

Elimination of the salary question removed what had threatened to be a troublesome conflict. The President recommended larger salaries for the higher officials, but Senator Robinson (Democrat), of Arkansas, chairman of the joint committee, and others had favored increases for lower salaried Government workers.

London, Feb. 16 (U.P.).—King George VI took his royal family to the fair today and British subjects discovered, among other things, that the monarch is a better subject for news photographers than his predecessor the present Duke of Windsor.

Photographers swarmed around the royal party and snapped pictures of its arrival. The King discovered that Mary, the Princess Royal, had strayed off, called her back and signaled cameramen to return.

HardwickPlans 'Navy System' Of Football

New Coach, Praising His Predecessor, Would Follow His Path.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 16.—The development of the kind of football taught by Tom Hamilton at the Naval Academy into a distinctive Navy system, is the object of Harry Hardwick, his classmate and teammate on the Navy's great eleven of 1926.

Said Hardwick: "I am relieving a man whom, unreservedly, I consider the finest coach in the service. Tom Hamilton has, in my opinion, set a coaching pace that will be difficult to duplicate. His record against Army and Notre Dame alone make him the most successful coach in Navy history. I intend to try to continue the sound system established by him. I have the advantage of taking over an organization that is shipshape in every respect. I only hope I can keep the pace set by Tom Hamilton."

Prolonging this statement, Hardwick said that he believed that it would be possible to develop the system of football taught my Hamilton into one that would be distinctive of the service, and that his efforts would be along this line. Minor changes might be possible, he said, next year to fit in with material, but all the main points would be preserved, down to the numbering of the players and plays.

Of interest is the fact that Hardwick will find among the most valuable members of his squad for next year the players who were given their first insight into Navy football by him when he was plebe coach three seasons ago and who will be members of the graduating class. The list includes such backs as Bill Ingram, Bob Antrim, Frank Case and Charley Reimann, with Ray Dubois, guard, who is next year's captain; Frank Lynch, tackle; Dick Fincher, center, and Irwin Fike and Heber Player, ends, as well as other useful players both in the backfield and line.

New Orleans Race To Breezing Along

New Orleans, Feb. 16 (AP).—Breezing Along, in the money in each of his five starts this year, made it victory number three today in taking the measure of seven other $1,900 platers over a mile and a sixteenth at the Fair Grounds today.

Carrying Mrs. F. S. Harris' silks, the six-year-old gelded son of Whiskaway made all its own pace and finished with two lengths to spare to pay $5 as the favorite. Second money went to Mrs. Ed Haughton's Kapena in a photo finish with Wee Emma. Both Kapena and Wee Emma had won their previous races.

Cards and Browns Shun Night Ball

St. Louis, Feb. 15 (AP).—Night baseball will not be played by the Cardinals and Browns at home this year.

Owners of both clubs said today engineers informed them installation of a lighting system could not be completed before the season opened in April they did not desire ing playing of games.

Charles Schwartz, for 48 years head of one of the city's leading jewelry businesses, died yesterday in St. Vincent's Hospital at Miami Beach, Fla. He was 72 years old.

Mr. Schwartz left Washington to spend the remainder of the winter in Florida with his wife, Mrs. Dora K. Schwartz, just a week prior to his death. Though his health had been failing for more than a year, he was, at the time of his departure from the Capital, comparatively well and his death came as a shock to his business associates here.

With Mr. Schwartz at death was his son, Samuel Schwartz, who had been summoned to Miami Beach by his father's sudden illness over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Schwartz made their home at the Shoreham Hotel. The family business at 708 Seventh street northwest long has been one of the city's commercial landmarks. In recent years active management of the business had been intrusted to his son, though he continued until death a nominal headship.

Mr. Schwartz came to this country from Russia. He lived for a time in Philadelphia and Denver, coming to the Capital about 50 years ago.

Mrs. Harkness, Capital Native, Is Dead at 88

Vienna Resident Recalled Many Incidents of the Civil War.

Mrs. Louise Harkness, widow of John W. Harkness, who was for many years a clerk in the assessor's office of the District government, and mother of Arthur W. Harkness, of the editorial staff of the United States Geological Survey, died at her residence in Vienna, Va., Monday.

Mrs. Harkness' father, Mr. A. W. Denham, was manager of the lime kilns of Capt. John W. Easby, a pioneer in the early development of Washington. She was born April 6, 1848, at her father's home at Nineteenth and E streets northwest.

At the outbreak of the War Between the States Mrs. Harkness was 13. Her father took his family to New Market, Va., "to escape the conflict," where for, the first two years of the war she saw many stirring scenes connected with the military operations in the valley of Virginia, the vivid impressions of which never faded from her memory.

Her recollections included the Inaugural parade of James Buchanan, in which a man from Michigan carried a cage containing a crow, with the inscription "We have caged the Black Crow"—a sobriquet of Gen. John C. Fremont—and then the grand review at the close of the War Between the States, which she contrasted with the review of the Rainbow Division at the close of the World War.

Mrs. Harkness was a member of the Western Presbyterian Church of this city and was active in its work for many years. Besides her son she is survived by a grandson, William D. Harkness, of Vienna, and a granddaughter, Mrs. Cornelius B. Shear, of Cherrydale, Va., and three great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at her residence in Vienna tomorrow at 2 p. m. and interment will be in Glenwood Cemetery here.
